Extremist voices must not drown out others

IN violent scenes that shocked the world this week, nine journalists, two policemen and an office caretaker were murdered at a magazine headquarters in Paris, in an act of bloody vengeance.

The masked gunmen were said to have shouted that they were avenging their prophet as they committed the atrocities.

The attack comes after the satirical publication, Charlie Hebdo, continued to publish cartoons featuring Mohammed, despite immense pressure to stop.

As an outlet that satirised all aspects of modern culture, the cartoonists refused to let one group be immune from their pencil-sharp observations.

"I would rather die on my feet than live on my knees," said publisher Stephane "Charb" Charbonnier - a chilling prediction of his own death, prompted by his defence of our right to freedom of speech.

It is all too easy, in the aftermath of senseless violence to condemn entire religious groups but it is important that we do not let the vicious acts of a few extremists pollute our view of the religious communities who make up an important part of our county's rich diversity. We offer our condolences to the families of those who died.

In other news, we look at the plight of St George's Memorial Chapel at Biggin Hill Airport - a monument to the 454 air crew based at Biggin Hill who died in the Second World War. The MoD are unable to fund the £50,000 running costs, so the airport has stepped in to offer its help to this important landmark.

Elsewhere, we report on the latest on Manston Airport and look at a scheme in Margate aimed at providing early help to people struggling with alcohol.

We also speak to a lawyer and relationship counselling organisation about what to do if you are considering separating from your partner, as so many do at this time of year.

Have a great weekend.

Battle of Britain chapel rescued after funds axed

Sarah Linney

sarah.linney@archant.co.uk

A KENT memorial chapel built to honour hundreds of air crew who died in the Second World War looks set to have its future secured by the generosity of Biggin Hill airport.

The Ministry of Defence had announced that it intended to withdraw funding for the St George's Memorial Chapel at the airport in March next year.

A public outcry followed, with almost 30,000 people signing a petition to save the chapel.

But this week the airport offered to provide the £50,000 a year the chapel needs to stay open - and is waiting to see if the offer will be accepted.

Managing director Will Curtis said: "The chapel is a focal point where people who want to pay their respects can come and we think it's an extremely important part of our heritage.

"I think it's very important that the men and women who served here are remembered, and that we remember that human conflict is very costly. For future generations to understand war is the best way

CHAPEL: Ministry of Defence announced it intended to withdraw funding for St George's Memorial Chapel not to repeat those mistakes."

The chapel, which is an active church, was built in 1951 as a memorial to the 454 Allied air crew who were killed while operating from Biggin Hill. Winston Churchill said that it should remain in permanence.

It is open daily and visited by around 12,000 people a year.

However, the MoD said that "given the diminishing size of the congregation", continuing to fund the chapel would be "an inappropriate use of public funds".

It had made it clear that it would try to find someone to take it over and would not relinquish responsibility for the chapel until this happened.

Martin Mitchener, who started the petition, said he had been contacted by people from across the world.

"At one point we were getting more than 800 signatures an hour," he said.

"The chapel is a beautiful place and I think everyone has their own reasons for wanting to save it. It is a place I come to mourn and remember my family members.

"The MoD could afford it if they wanted to."

Geoffrey Greensmith, vice chairman of the Friends of the chapel, added: "If we had lost the Battle of Britain, this country would have been invaded.

"Those people gave their lives. It's up to the rest of us to keep the chapel going."

Paramount Park team release statistics after second consultations

THE team behind the London Paramount project have released statistics from their recent consultations, suggesting that responses have been very positive so far.

London Paramount is a proposed theme park and leisure complex to be built on the Swanscombe Peninsula and due for completion in 2020.

The developer claims the complex, which would cost around £2 billion, would create around 27,000 jobs.

More than 2,000 people attended the public consultations, made up of a dozen events spread over two weeks in November 2014.

Visitors were invited to complete a feedback form answering questions on the draft masterplan, emerging transport proposals and the approach taken in relation to ecology and environment of the area.

Overall, 786 feedback forms were filled in, with 82 per cent of respondents indicating that they approve of the draft masterplan for the resort, 63 per cent of respondents approving of the emerging transport proposals and 75 per cent of respondents stated that they approve of plans to protect the ecology and environment.

Fenlon Dunphy, on behalf of London Paramount, said: "To receive such positive feedback at this stage in the design process is hugely encouraging and demonstrates the real enthusiasm people are showing.

"While a majority approve of the draft masterplan, emerging transport proposals and plans to protect the local ecology and environment we know there is much more to discuss in the next several months prior to the submission of our planning application.

"The next stage of public consultation events will be a series of workshop events in spring 2015 which will provide an opportunity for community members, stakeholders and industry specialists to come together to discuss and debate a number of different topics."

Farage accused of 'point scoring' after Paris shooting

PROSPECTIVE Parliamentary Candidate for Thanet South, and Ukip leader Nigel Farage, has been criticised for comments he made during an interview about the attack on French magazine Charlie Hebdo in which 12 people died.

He said: "We've got people living in these countries, holding our passports, who hate us. It does make one question the whole really gross attempt at encouraged division within society that we have had in the past few decades in the name of multiculturalism."

A number of political leaders have criticised the remarks.

Nick Clegg criticised the Ukip leader during his regular LBC radio phone in, saying he was 'dismayed' that Mr Farage's 'first reflex is to make political points.'

Dartford MP is 'glad to see the back' of troubled Tesco

TROUBLED retail giant Tesco announced it will abandon plans to develop a new superstore in Dartford.

The area's MP, Gareth Johnson, said that the retailer had treated the area 'appalling'.

Mr Johnson said: "This announcement ends a very frustrating and lamentable period for Dartford.

"Tesco has treated Dartford in an appalling manner and created uncertainty for years.

"I personally will be glad to see the back of Tesco but the important thing now is to work on Dartford's future - a development in Lowfield Street without a Tesco store."

Dave Lewis, Tesco's CEO said plans had been shelved after poor performance.

Court makes five Kent shops forfeit legal highs

MORE than 800 legal highs seized at five Kent branches of UK Skunkworks have been permanently forfeited after court action by KCC Trading Standards.

The shops in Gravesend, Maidstone, Canterbury, Ashford and Sheerness have been prevented from selling the products since enforcement action by KCC Trading Standards in July. In a co-ordinated series of raids, officers from Kent and Medway Trading Standards, with the support of police, seized samples of the legal highs from shops across the county and suspended the sale of many more.

Dartford magistrates said at a hearing on January 5 they were satisfied the products were unsafe and that there were deficiencies in their labelling.

Scrutiny committee to review the decision on Manston purchase order

By Maria Chiorando

maria.chiorando@archant.co.uk

MANSTON's coffin is littered with final nails - and again it seems the troubled airport will not be left to rest in peace, following news that Thanet District Council's decision not to pursue a Compulsory Purchase Order (CPO) will be reviewed by a council committee.

The airport has been in the news since it was bought by reclusive Scottish business woman Ann Gloag for £1 in October 2013.

Despite pledging to keep the airport running for at least two years, its doors were shut in May 2014, causing around 150 job losses.

Despite three offers from American investment company RiverOak - rumoured to be between £5 and £7 million - to buy the site, Ms Gloag refused to sell.

Thanet District Council pledged to look into undertaking a Compulsory Purchase Order - where land is obtained by a body without the consent of the owner.

The council maintained that it would only undertake this with financial backing from a full-indemnity partner.

Although RiverOak offered to partner the council, as a result of market research which suggested the airport might not prosper financially, the council finally decided against the CPO option in December.

In the meantime, two of the developers behind Sandwich's Discovery Park had acquired a majority stake in the land, for a rumoured £20 million. The site has now been designated as mixed-use.

Now, in a move that will delight Manston-fans, the council's scrutiny committee of cross-party councillors says it wants to review whether "appropriate procedures and processes were followed in reaching the decision".

While the committee may not overturn the council's decision, it can ask the cabinet to rethink the matter.

The decision will be reviewed at a meeting next week.

MPs will also be discussing the future of Manston Airport at a Commons select committee in February.

Search for Patrick Lamb continuing

THE girlfriend of missing man Patrick Lamb has thanked the public for their help searching for him and urged anyone with information to come forward.

Patrick Lamb, 28, who lives in Greenhithe, went missing after a night out with his friends in Maidstone on December 12.

He had booked a room at the Grange Moor Hotel in St Michael's Road, Maidstone, but never returned.

CCTV captured a number of images of Mr Lamb, who was last seen in Fairmeadow at around midnight on December 13.

The images show him stumbling, sparking fears he may have hit his head and could be hurt.

Natasha Morgan, his girlfriend of six years, said: "The public have been amazing, overwhelmingly helpful and really lovely. Thanks from the bottom of my heart, from me and Pat's family."

Anyone with information can contact police on 101 or visit www.abbtalk.com/pat.

Drug smuggler jailed after sniffer dog find

A LITHUANIAN lorry driver has been jailed for five years and four months after attempting to smuggle three kilos of cocaine into the UK.

The drugs had an estimated street value of £387,000.00.

Border Force officers stopped the Lithuanian-registered lorry at the freight controls in the Eastern Docks, Dover on September 22. After questioning the driver, Ceslovas Gailius, a detector dog was used to search the vehicle.

The dog, Arnie, gave a positive indication to a black rucksack that had been placed between pallets in the lorry's load of car parts. Officers opened the rucksack and found three cling filmed-wrapped packages of white powder which reacted positively to a field test for cocaine.

Gailius was arrested and an investigation carried out by the National Crime Agency.

He pleaded guilty at a hearing at Canterbury Crown Court on January 5 and was sentenced to imprisonment that day.

M25: The scene of traffic officer's death

Censure after traffic officer death on M25

THE Highways Agency has been issued with a Crown Censure - the equivalent of a criminal prosecution - for safety failings after Gravesend grandfather, John Walmsley, an experienced traffic officer with the agency, was killed by an out of control car.

The 59-year-old had been sent to an incident on the M25 on September 25, 2012. While he waited for a tow-truck for a stranded vehicle, a car skidded across the carriageway and hit him.

He died at the scene. The driver was subsequently convicted of causing death by careless driving.

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) took the decision to deliver a censure after finding fault in the agency's quarterly supervision checks at its Dartford outstation.

HSE inspector Guy Widdowson said the incident may have been preventable.

He said: "Mr Walmsley, who had worked as a traffic officer for seven years, was killed because he was not standing behind the safety barrier when a car crashed on the motorway."

"If the Highways Agency had conducted the necessary supervisory checks, he may have followed the correct safety procedures and prevented him from working the way he did."

Ukip councillor fired for alleged racism

A THANET councillor representing Ukip, thrown out of the party last month for making undisclosed racist comments, has been outed as calling black people 'negroes' by The Times newspaper.

Rozanne Duncan, who is a councillor for Cliftonville East, was kicked out of the party in December for making the comments.

But it is only now that the full extent of these comments has been revealed.

According to The Times, Ms Duncan said she had a 'problem' with black people.

She described them as 'negroes' and said that there was 'something about their faces'.

It is believed Ms Duncan, 68, made the comments during filming for a BBC television documentary about Ukip.

In a statement issued by the party at the time, a spokesman said: "Ukip is expelling Rozanne Duncan under rule 15 of its constitution for bringing the party into disrepute."

"She has 28 days to appeal."

What will make next week's headlines...

Ferry operator gets set for ruling appeal

CROSS Channel ferry operator, MyFerryLink, will be taking stock after a Competition Appeal Tribunal ruled that an earlier decision banning it from running services from the Port of Dover should be upheld.

The tribunal stated that the Competition and Markets Authority had jurisdiction to take the decision on June 27 2014.

The loss is the latest in an ongoing series of legal battles by MyFerryLink to allow it to continue its services from Dover.

The ferry provider has said that the tribunal accepted a number of the points which it made and it intends to renew its appeal.

In the meantime MyFerryLink says that it will continue to run its services between Dover and Calais as normal.

Get registered to vote for general election in May

THE public are being urged to make sure they register to vote ahead of this year's general election.

The biggest change to the electoral registration system in nearly 100 years took place last year.

It changed the way people register to vote.

It replaced the old Victorian system – where the 'head of household' registered everyone living in their property – to a new one, in which each individual is responsible for registering themselves.

To find out more about registration and voting, visit www.aboutmyvote.co.uk

Mining museum given £215,000

Jamie Weir

Jamie.Weir@archant.co.uk

TONBRIDGE-based Hadlow College has good reason to be happy after its Betteshanger Sustainable Park project was given a grant of £215,000 by the Heritage Lottery Fund.

The project, which will see the former colliery at Betteshanger redeveloped into an environmental complex, received the funding for its plan to build a museum dedicated to Kent's mining heritage. The museum will form a vital part of the 121-hectare site, and will celebrate and preserve the county's unique coal mining heritage.

Jim Davies, a member of the Kent Mining Heritage steering group, said: "On behalf of the mining heritage team on the steering group, we would like to add our thanks to to Hadlow and the HLF for the opportunity to move forward with our museum, to enable ble us to maintain our strong and enduring bonds with our mining communities.

"The museum will provide a lasting legacy for the generations that follow."

Betteshanger is the site of the last mine which was closed in Kent during the late 80s. When the final pit closed, it caused havoc for employment prospects in the area.

Many of the areas formerly associated with mining are still bearing the brunt of that abandonment and have struggled to adapt to the closure of the mining industry in the area, with fewer jobs and a bleaker economic outlook.

The new development aims to change all of that, with a total of £40 million invested into the site in the project's first phase. It is hoped this will create around 1,000 jobs.

The new complex will combine sustainable business and commerce, education, sustainable energy and tourism.

The HLF uses National Lottery money to fund projects which help people explore, enjoy and protect heritage.

Mark Lumsdon-Taylor is the finance director at Hadlow College, and an executive director for the Betteshanger project. He said that the funding would be helpful.

He said: "I am delighted with this wonderful outcome following a long process to get to this point.

"This is such a crucial project."

Paul Watkins, leader of Dover District Council, said that the funding would push an important part of the county's cultural heritage to the fore while also helping attract tourists to east Kent.

He said: "We're delighted that plans to celebrate Kent's mining heritage have taken another big step forward.

"This is a key component of the plans for the Betteshanger Sustainable Park and will be a popular attraction for local people and tourists alike.

DELIGHTED: Mark Lumsdon-Taylor

"The aim is to provide a unique visitor attraction that will combine mining heritage alongside new, sustainable energy technology."

The first part of the development is expected to open next year.

A&E wait is second worst in England

Jamie Weir

Jamie.Weir@archant.co.uk

MEDWAY NHS Foundation Trust, which runs the Medway Maritime Hospital, has recorded the second worst accident and emergency department waiting time in England, according to statistics released by NHS England this week.

The national target is for 95 per cent of patients to be seen in less than four hours. Medway only managed to see 79 per cent of its A&E patients before the four-hour period was up.

That was only slightly better than Cambridge University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, which was the worst in England, with 75.6 per cent of patients attended to within the time limit. Despite Medway's particularly poor performance, the picture looks bleak for many of the county's NHS trusts, with none managing to achieve the national target in the period between October 5 and December 28.

The figures – which are published quarterly – examine the performance of A&E departments across the country, and are broken down into NHS trusts, rather than individual hospitals.

Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust outperformed the rest of Kent, managing to achieve a total of 94.7 per cent of patients seen to within four hours. But even with a better performance than any other trust in the county, it was unable to achieve the national target.

However, it did manage to outperform the national average of 92.6 per cent.

The statistics show the worst performance nationally since the target was introduced for hospitals in 2004.

The figures from Medway hospital show that a total of 319 people were left waiting to be admitted for longer than the four-hour period. By comparison, the national average number of people left waiting for more than the target time was 268.

Dr Sarah Pinto-Duschinsky, director of operations and delivery for NHS England, blamed the failure to meet targets on an increase in demand.

She said: "Today's figures show that in the three months to the end of December more than nine out of 10 A&E patients in England continued to be seen and treated in less than four hours – the best measured performance of any major western country."

"In the immediate run-up to Christmas the NHS treated 446,500 A&E attendees, up 38,000 on the same week last year. And there were 112,600 emergency admissions – the highest number in a single week since we started publishing performance figures in 2010.

"We faced similar demand over Christmas itself. In the week ending December 28 A&E attendances were up more than 31,000 on the same period last year, meaning we successfully treated more patients in less than four hours than ever before."

The GMB Union – the union for NHS and ambulance staff – says that the figures show the NHS is being overwhelmed due to a lack of money from the government.

Rehana Azam, the GMB NHS national officer, said: "Patients and staff are paying the price for the government's failure to manage and invest sufficiently in the NHS."

"Staff morale is low and many staff are required to come in on their rest days to help deliver care in a service that is massively overstretched."

A Department of Health spokesperson said: "We know the NHS is busier than ever before, which is why we've given the NHS a record £700m this winter for more doctors, nurses and beds. The NHS has ensured there are plans in every area to manage the extra demand."

What 2015 has in store for our rail commuters

Travellers are bracing themselves for the start of a new timetable from Southeastern to add to the disruption services have already suffered due to the ongoing Thameslink works programme, writes Chris Murphy...

AS IF all the work on the London Bridge line wasn't enough for Kent commuters to contend with, a new Southeastern timetable has also been introduced.

In an effort to at least reduce the pain of reaching some parts of London from the county, Southeastern believes it has come up with the best compromise.

It says: "From Sunday, January 11, onwards, there is a new Southeastern timetable begins. No Charing Cross services will stop at London Bridge.

"Charing Cross services to and from New Cross, St Johns, Deptford, Greenwich, Maze Hill and Westcombe Park will be permanently diverted to and from Cannon Street.

"And Charing Cross services to Plumstead, Woolwich Dockyard, Belvedere and Erith will also be diverted to run to/from Cannon Street."

This is all down to the ongoing Thameslink programme that promises to transform north-south travel through London.

With more people using the trains, the huge rise in demand from passengers means it is vital that improved connections giving better travel options to more destinations are introduced.

Engineers are restricted in what they can do and can't simple build new infrastructure and then close down the old lines once the new ones are up and running.

The changes need to be done to lines and buildings that are literally next to each other.

With more than 50 million people taking journeys through London Bridge station each year, it was clear the old place was creaking.

By 2018, there will be improved connections, more reliable journeys, better stations and facilities, as well as new trains, says Southeastern.

COMMUTERS: Facing new timetable

Network Rail is also untangling the track outside the station which will reduce delays from train crossing pathways and waiting outside the station for platforms to clear.

The Thameslink Programme has already delivered longer, 12-car trains between Brighton and Bedford, platform lengthening at several stations, track work and upgraded stations including West Hampstead, Farringdon and Blackfriars.

London Bridge station is now being redeveloped. It's hoped Kent will be getting the same treatment.

The Thameslink Programme is a partnership between Department for Transport, Network Rail, Southeastern, Southern, Thameslink and Siemens.

David Statham, the managing director of Southeastern, told KoS: "We've been working closely with Network Rail and the rest of the industry for the past two years to prepare for this next phase of work and communicate the changes to passengers.

"This major programme of work will mean significant timetable changes and we're encouraging all our passengers to check before they travel to see how they might be affected.

"Services are expected to be busier than usual while people adjust to the new arrangements, and so we do recommend customers allow a bit of extra time for their journey.

"We will have nearly 200 extra employees at our busiest stations to help customers with journey advice, and we'll be running as many services as possible into Cannon Street, including extending the opening hours of the station, to allow people who need to travel to London Bridge the opportunity to get there."

So what of the future for Kent commuters? Following on from the new January timetable, it's all change again in August 2016 with another new timetable starting.

This time, it's better news as Charing Cross services will resume calling at London Bridge, but then Cannon Street services will not call at London Bridge.

From 2018 onwards, the Cannon Street services will resume calling at London Bridge and Greenwich services will not go to Charing Cross.

Passengers will also see the completion of track, signalling and major bridge work around London Bridge station.

The expanded Thameslink service will begin to serve London Bridge too, offering customers more travel choices.

For more information on the changes, visit here <http://www.southeasternrailway.co.uk/thameslink/january2015/>

CHANGES TO THE MAINLINE AND HIGH SPEED SERVICES

■ Extension of High Speed from Faversham to Ramsgate that will serve Whitstable, Herne Bay and Birchington-on-Sea with an hourly all day High Speed service.

■ Extension of High Speed from Dover to Ramsgate that will serve Martin Mill, Walmer, Deal and Sandwich with an hourly all day High Speed service.

■ The introduction of a High Speed 'Rounder' service. The High Speed service will run from St Pancras to Faversham, Ramsgate, Deal, Dover, Ashford and to St Pancras providing a through service from North to East Kent and vice versa.

■ Reduction of splitting and joining services at Faversham and Ashford to make it simpler for passengers, improve performance & reduce journey times.

■ Extension of an hourly service from the Maidstone East line to Canterbury West.

■ Introduction of 'skip-stop' pattern (where not all services halt at all stations) on Maidstone East line in order to offer a more even spread of trains between Ashford and Maidstone and a faster journey time to London from stations between Maidstone and Ashford.

■ Capacity enhancements on peak time services from Ashford to St Pancras and elimination of splitting and joining of trains at Ashford in peak times providing additional capacity and journey time improvements.

■ Introduction of High Speed services to Snodland.

■ Introduction of a mainline call at Denmark Hill that will provide an hourly all day, including Sundays, service from North Kent, Medway & Bromley South to Denmark Hill for connections into London overground and Thameslink services.

■ Some mainline trains from Cannon Street to Ramsgate via Medway will start or terminate at Blackfriars.

■ Ashford to Dover will be reduced to two trains an hour off-peak.

THAMESLINK AND THE FUTURE

THE Thameslink programme makes huge promises that it will all be worth it in the end.

It will mean more stations outside London can connect to the Thameslink route, giving better travel options to more destinations.

There will also be some new trains. Not all will be replaced, but those on the expanded Thameslink route will be new by the end of 2018, with the first new trains entering service in 2016.

And then there is the improvement to London Bridge, a logjam for years.

Around 54 million passengers go through London Bridge station each year, but come 2018 there will be improved facilities and two-thirds more space for passengers.

Bravery and sacrifice from Second World War recalled

This year is the 70th anniversary of the end of fighting in the Second World War and a host of events are planned across the county to commemorate and remember the conflict. Chris Murphy finds out more...

LAST year saw the centenary of the start of First World War – now we are 70 years on from the end of the Second World War and Kent will be marking the occasion too.

Events are still being organised but KoS is taking the opportunity now to look at what has been organised so far.

The county's tourism promoter, Visit Kent is at the centre of letting people know what's happening to ensure this terrible conflict and its momentous conclusion are not forgotten by young or old alike:

■ The terror of war throws up many unexpected horrors, and one of those that marks out the Second World War is, of course, the Nazi persecution of the Jews and others on a scale not seen in centuries.

Holocaust Memorial Day is January 27, and an annual Commemoration Service takes place in the Garden of Remembrance, Sandgate Road, Folkestone, in memory of those who died in the Holocaust and subsequent genocides. ■ Among the events will be the Airfix D-Day Experience at the Hornby Visitor Centre in February. The centre says its Operation Neptune exhibition features a huge interactive diorama and displays setting out some of the key stories from the Day of Days.

■ Although major cities like London and Coventry saw plenty of bombing, Kent bore the brunt of failed drops from the Luftwaffe. Their pilots reportedly often dropped their left-over munitions at random over the county.

To mark some of those incidents, the Ramsgate Blitz Walks take place at the start of February and again in future months.

The organisers say: "These are guided walks or just over two hours around the heaviest bombed seaside town in the UK. Those taking part can relive the dark days of the Second World War, hear stories of ordinary people on the front line and visit the places connected with those stories."

■ Ramsgate is also the home to service and parade to mark Operation Dynamo. This year is the 75th anniversary of the evacuation of Dunkirk by the Little Ships.

Over several days in May, there will be a church service in a marquee on the harbour, followed by a parade to commemorate the evacuation of Dunkirk beach.

There is also a VIP inspection of more than 50 Dunkirk Little Ships in the harbour, and perhaps a number of Spitfires and a couple of Hurricanes will be doing a fly-past.

The Little Ships that can make it,

DUNKIRK: This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Dunkirk evacuation by the famous Little Ships and of course weather permitting, will be actually sailing to Dunkirk.

They will be piped out by a local piper and, Royal Navy permitting, will be accompanied by a gun salute from the sea. Their return later will also be welcomed by a gun salute off land, this time if the army allows it.

At the weekend, Ramsgate harbour will be transformed into May 1940, with tea dances and music. Big Band Concerts are also promised.

■ Dreamland in Margate hopes to reconstruct a May 1940 reception centre and the Winter Gardens Margate will be having an ENSA Production with the Theatre Royal Margate hosting a 1940s production called Spitfire Solo.

■ Dover Museum will be having an exhibition about the Dunkirk evacuation from 16 February, running throughout the anniversary. ■ Of course, this year will also see the launch of a major attraction that looks back at the Battle of Britain. Thanks to a government handout at the end of 2014, The Wing is set to open at Capel-le-Ferne.

The stunning new visitor and education centre will see plenty of visitors.

Despite the government money, trust chairman Richard Hunting is encouraging supporters to keep giving in order to make sure it stays open and maintained for future generations.

He said: "It costs around £70,000 a year to run and we also need to make sure we have sufficient funds to maintain The Wing, which will house our exciting new Scramble Experience."

"The Wing is on schedule to open in March during the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Britain, and will be a fitting tribute to the bravery and sacrifice of the men who took part in the summer and early autumn of 1940."

The Scramble Experience will take up half of the new Spitfire wing-shaped building at the cliff-top home of the National Memorial to the Few, on the white cliffs just outside Dover, and will use high-tech, interactive exhibits to tell the story of the Battle of Britain.

The other half of The Wing, which will also house a retail area and a first floor café with superb views across The Channel to France, will be used as an education centre offering first-class dedicated facilities for school groups.

The site also features the Memorial itself, the Christopher Foxley-Norris Memorial Wall, which lists the names of all those who took part in the battle, and full-scale replicas of a Spitfire and a Hurricane.

■ Later in the year, in September, there is the Wildfire III Memorial Parade and Service in Queenborough on the Isle of Sheppey. Details are still being finalised, but the event will definitely be happening.

Other organisations are still busy sorting out their events, so it is guaranteed there will be something to see and do in many of our towns this year to mark the ending of the Second World War.

For more information on all these events and to check back for others still being planned, visit <http://www.visitkent.co.uk/micro-sites/frontline-kent/what-s-on>

Stopping and thinking about how much we actually drink

When someone utters the words 'alcohol abuse', some might immediately picture stereotypical images of a man on a bench swigging from a can, or a teenager binge drinking during the weekend. But this is not always the case, as Molly Kersey discovers at the launch of a campaign to get us all to cut down and give our health a boost ...

MANY of the people who are abusing alcohol are actually hard-working professionals and fully-functioning adults. And they may not even realise that they are drinking that little bit too much, and too often.

Kent County Council is encouraging people to think carefully about what they drink on a regular basis, and sign up to Dry January – a national campaign spearheaded by Alcohol Concern – to cut down and give their health a boost.

The challenge is to stay alcohol free for 31 days, with the hope that this will have beneficial effects for the rest of the year.

The problem of alcohol abuse has been widespread throughout the county, with Kent hospitals treating approximately 20,000 cases of alcohol-related illness and injury a year, costing the NHS in the area £108m.

Some 272,000 people in the county are drinking at dangerous levels, increasing their risk of many illnesses and conditions that could lead to them dying earlier than they should.

Research also shows that the number of people dying in Kent from liver disease has risen by 43 per cent since 2002.

"It's mostly preventable," said KCC's interim director of public health, Andrew Scott-Clark.

"In a sense that bucks the trend, given that premature deaths from heart disease and cancers are generally decreasing."

Experts are encouraging people to really consider how much alcohol they are consuming, challenging misconceptions that a few too many pints in the pub or glasses of wine after work are 'harmless'.

There are simple steps to take for those who are concerned.

"Cut down on alcohol as much as you possibly can, and think about what you drink," said Mr Scott-Clark.

"We are recommending people stick to the recommended daily amounts, three to four

EARLY INTERVENTION: The QEOM scheme helps people who are drinking too much units per day for men and two to three units per day for women, and two alcohol-free days a week."

However, it is not that easy for everyone, and KCC works closely with the health service, voluntary organisations and other bodies to provide specialist support and treatment for those who need further help to cut back.

The QEOM hospital in Margate is piloting a scheme to help patients who are at risk from their alcohol use. Patients are screened – asked a set of questions about their alcohol consumption – so any issues can be identified, and given information and advice about the help available to them.

It started in February last year, and there have already been a large number of referrals to social enterprise Turning Point as a result.

There is a direct referral system, with nurses employed by them regularly in the hospital.

It is a way to help the people who need specific attention and extra time to diagnose their problems with alcohol.

QEOM alcohol misuse nurse Malcolm Shaw said that before the pilot, there could be as few as seven to nine referrals from hospitals in the whole of Kent in a year.

"In line with recent public health objectives we are aiming to screen as many patients as possible who come into the hospital with alcohol and drug use," he said.

"The statistics show that for about one in eight people it is very effective.

"We are developing this pilot and we have to pray that we get the funding for the future."

If funding is granted and the pilot is successful, the scheme will be rolled out across the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford and the Kent and Canterbury Hospital, with dedicated teams there dealing with alcohol and substance abuse issues.

Mr Shaw added: "People are at risk of slow and insidious damage from alcohol.

"We have a real culture around the use of alcohol. What we have is a sector of society that drinks to higher than recommended levels and a certain percentage of them in their 40s, 50s and 60s are coming to hospital with alcohol-related problems."

Mr Shaw said that the screening with enable professionals to spot early indicators of a potential problem, as people could be abusing alcohol for a long time before their health starts to suffer.

"The chap that goes to the pub and has three or four pints after work, or the female executive who comes home and has half a bottle of wine at night to wind down – they can potentially do this for quite some time but are building up the potential for serious health-related issues later on."

Rita Jennings, Turning Point nurse manager, said: "I think people come in with a problem that is symptomatic of their alcohol use, rather than the alcohol use itself. Without screening you are not going to pick that up.

"You can work with them and show them how alcohol is impacting on their life. It doesn't work if you coerce them."

Turning Point's hospital liaison nurse, Dinesh Dhooonooah, agrees.

"I saw a man in hospital and he wasn't interested, but now he wants the help," he said.

"We give them information and let them know we are there for them when they are ready."

Ms Jennings agrees that alcohol use is firmly embedded within the culture we live in.

She said: "It's acceptable, it's available everywhere as part of our culture, and it's very difficult to move away from that.

"But if people can recognise that their dependency is increasing in any way, they can come and get some support to get it back under control.

"Treatment isn't all about talking about your alcohol use – it's normalising your life again, it's about the fun you used to have before you were drinking.

"It's focusing on the whole person and moving them forward into the area they want."

CASE STUDY: VICKY GROOM, ADMINISTRATOR

VICKY was referred to Turning Point after seeking help for alcohol misuse, and has been free from alcohol for two years. She became a peer mentor, then was employed as an administrator last year.

"I decided to seek help because it was causing problems within my family and my health was starting to be affected.

"Initially I went to my GP, who referred me.

"I think for me, the most valuable thing that Turning Point provides is the motivational interventions.

"It's very easy to get demotivated, and for it to be successful you need to keep motivated at all times. It's something that you can't let go of, you have to be aware of it all the time.

"The psychosocial interventions are invaluable. Unfortunately some people think they can come in, get pills and that will be the end of it, but it's not like that and actually detox is a very small part of it.

"That's just to deal with the physical symptoms of withdrawing. The hard work comes from you really realising that you have to start the change.

"You have to come to the realisation yourself, but speaking to organisations like Turning Point, even if you don't fully engage straight away, can help. Just speaking to them, finding out what's available and seeing how you go from there.

"Don't be scared to speak to someone about it. It's a lot more common than people realise. You think you're the only one, but once you realise that you're not on your own, it helps.

"I strongly believe that peer mentoring is valuable as well, because you're hearing about things from someone who's been there.

"You're not listening to someone just tell you 'you should do this, you should do that'; you can listen to someone say 'this is what I did and these things might work for you'.

You can listen to other people's experiences.

"I would love to one day be a recovery worker."

EXPERT VIEW: LEE BUSHER, SOUTH EAST COAST AMBULANCE (SECAMB) MANAGER

"WE handle more than 850,000 calls a year. Calls involving alcohol as the main concern only represent about five per cent of these, but the actual total is likely to be far higher if other categories potentially involving alcohol, such as road accidents or falls and assaults, were also included.

"The festive and New Year period has been an extremely difficult time for us. It's a massive drain on our resources."

Mr Busher said that there could be violence and aggression which came with the job.

"Unfortunately that's part of Friday and Saturday nights, ambulance crews regularly being verbally and physically abused.

"I think the alcohol is a very important factor in people's behaviour. The more they drink, the less inhibited they become. It does cause quite a few problems.

"It means if we are dealing with someone who's had too much to drink, that ambulance is tied up so we can't get to the people who really need help, such as breathing difficulties, just around the corner.

"People often think it's just teenagers but it's not. It's a whole age range.

"We see 12-year-olds who have had alcohol up to 70-year-olds who have had too much to drink, so it's a very broad spectrum.

"We're dedicated to helping all patients and we treat people who are alcohol dependent every day, and are able to help direct these patients to the specialist help they require.

"We urge people to be aware of the impact drinking to excess has on the ambulance service.

"We want people to enjoy themselves but also to know their limits, look out for others they are with and be sensible."

EXPERT VIEW: LEE ROSE, KENT FIRE AND RESCUE SERVICE'S HEAD OF COMMUNITY SAFETY

"WE have had quite a busy Christmas, as we do every year. The good news is we have had no fatalities this year. The alcohol-related issues for us really are around drink driving."

Mr Rose said that fires in the home were also a problem during the festive period.

"We attend many kitchen and house fires that have started through people not paying attention or because they have left cooking unattended.

"There's no doubt that alcohol plays a part in those distractions - fire starts when people's attention stops. Alcohol can make it harder for people to wake up and realise what might be happening in their home, making it difficult to escape.

"Alcohol can alter judgment and may cause people to make bad decisions. We would always urge people to consider fire safety in their homes and watch how much they drink.

"We don't want to stop people having a good time, but make sure you do have a working smoke alarm."

Testing time for relationships

For many Christmas is a time of joy, wonder, togetherness and love but for some it is a time of stress and strain when emotions run high and any fault lines in a relationship are tested to breaking point. It's no wonder then that the first week of January sees a big increase in calls to family lawyers and relationship counsellors. Sarah Linney reports...

The festive season is officially over (sorry, everyone). But for many couples, along with the decorations and cards and endless turkey leftovers, another thing will be coming to an end: their relationship.

The first week of January has become a time each year when family lawyers and relationship counsellors see a big increase in calls from couples whose new year resolution isn't a detox or a diet, but a divorce.

But can such an upsetting situation be made less upsetting – and even resolved in ways those involved might not have thought possible?

Kirstie Law, a partner in the family law team at Kent solicitors Thomson Snell and Passmore, which has offices in Tunbridge Wells and Dartford, says the post-Christmas surge in splits is not hard to explain.

"It's partly that in November and December people put their to-do lists on hold while they are getting ready for Christmas – even people who have been separated for a year or two," she said.

"And it's partly that people have difficult Christmases. They feel let down by arguments and plans not living up to expectations, and they think everyone else has a perfect marriage – no one else seems to be the couple that's arguing on the way to the party."

Jo Brown, from Relate Medway and North Kent, agrees. "When families and couples spend substantial amounts of time together, that's when they decide they want out of their relationship – the second busiest time for us is after the school summer holidays," she said.

"Problems can be covered up in the normal routine. People are busy and they can get away without really addressing issues, but when they are spending time together, it may be harder to ignore them.

"And if these issues have been buried for ages, when the arguments come they can be quite explosive.

"A lot of problems start after babies have been born. People don't realise how much time children are going to take up and how their lives are going to change."

However, Miss Law says that these problems aren't always a sign that the marriage is doomed – and urges people to think very, very carefully before deciding to split.

"Do take a rain check and think, is it really over – or is it about the high expectations of Christmas, comparing one's life to everyone else's and feeling dissatisfied?" she said.

"Is your marriage really worse, or are you imagining that everyone else's is better?

"As human beings we are very good at getting on a conveyor belt and not stopping to think about it. But you don't want to look back in two years' time and think, we should have tried counselling.

DIFFICULT DECISION: The advice is take a 'rain check and think, is it really over - is it about high expectations...'

"If I see a couple and it is clear that they have issues, I would suggest referring them to a counsellor to see if the relationship could be saved first."

Couples or individuals who get in touch with Relate are offered an initial consultation, when they talk through the issues with a counsellor.

If they decide to go for regular sessions, they will see the same counsellor each week or each fortnight, at the same time.

"It does work a lot of the time. The counsellors are all well-trained and specialised in their areas," Mrs Brown said.

"Even if only one person wants to attend, often the other might join later.

"Ultimately it's about learning how to listen to each other and recognise what each other is thinking, feeling and saying.

"A lot of the time people don't listen to each other – and jobs can be very demanding, and their lives get very full up.

"It's also about learning how to compromise and remember what you love about each other. A lot of it is of

THINK OF THE CHILDREN

FOR unmarried couples, the situation is simpler as neither party has the right to make a financial claim from the other.

However, if the couple have children, both have parental responsibility as long as they are named on the birth certificate – which means a responsibility to take care of the children financially as well as a right to time with the children.

This will probably involve one parent paying maintenance for the children to the other – an amount which you can calculate online yourself, or through the Child Maintenance Service.

Even if the father is not named on the birth certificate, he and the mother can agree that he is also responsible for the children – or he can apply to the court for a parental responsibility order.

ten just normal irritations – money worries can be very powerful. Those Disney-perfect happy-ever-afters probably would get into difficulties if they had to face what most couples face.”

She says that even if the couple do decide to split, going through counselling first will often still turn out to be beneficial.

“Hopefully there might be less animosity and they might be able to do it in a more friendly way,” Mrs Brown said.

“When children are involved, it’s all about how you separate.

“With all the emotional upset that separation inevitably causes to family and children, there are some cases where the family is better off, but it should be a last resort.”

For a couple who have definitely decided to split, a bitter battle in the courts is far from the only option.

Couples can opt for mediation – where they work together with a mediator to come to an agreement – or collaboration, where they each have their own lawyer but all four parties still sit down together to work out arrangements.

Both of these are less expensive, stressful and time-consuming than a legal battle decided by a judge – in fact, a couple can end up working so much out between them that they barely need a lawyer at all.

Mediation also offers an opportunity for the couple’s children to be involved – if they choose to use a mediator who is qualified to work with children (which Miss Law recommends), that person can talk to the children and find out how they are feeling.

“The children can often say what they would like to happen or what they feel the problems are. Often children are very perceptive,” Miss Law explained.

“They can feed back to the parents about the children’s feelings and wishes – they will agree with the child what they are going to say. The child can also tell them things they don’t want to tell their parents, which the mediator won’t relay back, unless the child is at risk of harm.”

The most important thing, she says, is to aim to make the whole process as painless as possible.

“If you are going to end a relationship, you want to do it in a way that isn’t going to have a big fallout for everyone else,” Miss Law said.

“Don’t go into it thinking you want to take the other person to the cleaners. Think about the fact that you want to be able to co-parent with that person, maybe keep them as a friend and keep in touch with their extended family, and you don’t want your mutual friends to feel awkward about it all.

“If you can work things out between you, you are more likely to come out with a reasonable relationship and a better settlement than if you went to court and spent tens of thousands of pounds.”

But she says that, conversely, if someone does want to split from their partner but feels they can’t face doing so, it’s important to think that decision through too.

“I would say go and see a counsellor and talk through with them why you don’t feel able to do it,” Miss Law said.

“It could be for religious reasons or because of family pressure, or out of fear of what will happen to the children, the business or to you if you are on your own.

“But I know one couple who have continued running a business for 20 years together since they separated. You get people who keep jointly-owned holiday homes. It depends on the emotional involvement.

Manager's pride in his battling Whites

MANAGER: Chris Kinnear

Dover Athletic's FA Cup dream ended at the hands of Premiership side Crystal Palace last Sunday at The Crabble. The Conference side were beaten 0-4 but won praise around the county for their brave display against a team nearly 90 places above them in the league. Jamie Weir looks back at the Whites' unforgettable day...

DOVER Athletic were 'caught in a perfect storm' during their defeat at the hands of Premiership side Crystal Palace, according to their manager Chris Kinnear.

The Whites had managed to make it through to the third round of the FA Cup after solid performances against two teams which, on paper, were stronger than them.

And hopes were high that with Crystal Palace in a state of flux following their manager's departure and close to the relegation zone, that Dover might be able to continue their run of giant-slaying and claim the Premiership team's scalp.

But it wasn't to be, and when the two teams clashed, at Dover's Crabble Road stadium, the brave Whites were simply outclassed by Palace – who sit 86 places above Dover in the league ladder – eventually losing 4-0.

Whites manager Kinnear said that while he was disappointed, he was still proud of the team despite the result.

He said: "I am disappointed that we did not play as well as we could do, but realistic that we have just faced a massive club.

"They played a full Premiership side and four weeks ago a team similar to that beat Liverpool.

"The lads may have their heads down, but I have said to them that they have achieved a lot and I'm sure a lot of their friends would have liked to have been playing here today."

The game didn't start well for the Whites, as Palace managed to snatch a couple of early chances at goal.

Dover, meanwhile, looked nervy in their defence, and were unable to take the ball close to the Palace goal line.

When Palace drew first blood just nine minutes into the game, Dover looked despondent, becoming even more cautious in their approach. The Whites had conceded a corner which eventually ended up at the feet of Palace centre back Scott Dann; the defender smashed the right-footed shot from the six-yard box to put Crystal Palace in the lead.

Dover's fate was sealed around 20 minutes later when, in the 33rd minute, Dann made it a brace with an on-target header from close range.

After that goal, the writing was on the wall for the Whites, with little hope of them getting back into the game.

To the team's credit, they didn't give up and crumble, but battled on, trying to minimise their losses.

And they managed to hold off the Premiership team's onslaught for the

CRABBLE'S HEROES: Despite going behind to the Eagles early in the game, the Whites commitment to the cause was obvious and they kept on trying and earned praise from their manager remainder of the first half, finally making their way to the dressing room nursing a 2-0 deficit.

Whites defender Richard Orlu admitted that Crystal Palace had managed to take control of the game with the early goal, never really allowing Dover to get back into it.

He said: "It was excellent to play in front of so many people against a team like that.

"It is just a shame about the first two goals we conceded as they were set pieces - we wanted to stay in the game a little bit longer."

After half-time, the performance was lacklustre from both teams, with Dover failing to really get into attack mode and never troubling Palace's keeper, Wayne Hennessey, who seemed at times more like a spectator than an active player.

In fact, the Whites only managed one shot at goal in the 90 minutes, compared to Palace's 28 shots.

The third goal for the Eagles came in the 67th minute, with the fourth and final goal close to the end of the match, in the 86th minute, underlining Palace's dominance throughout the game.

Despite Dover's bravery throughout, the fourth goal illustrated why Palace sit four leagues above Dover Athletic, with a short-range shot punching through the Whites' defences.

Kinnear said it best, stating that although the team had lost, he was still happy with what his players had achieved this season.

He said: "We were caught in a perfect storm with their new manager coming in and they did not take liberties with us. We started really nervous and they went for us.

"From being on a great unbeaten winning streak, it is definitely disappointing, but the players all had a really busy festive period, with a bundle of games, and we have done incredibly well.

"I can't be disappointed with the players and what they have achieved recently. People were saying we were going to get relegated this season, but we have reached the third round of the FA Cup, and a game which everyone else in Kent would have loved to have been playing.

"There are disappointments, but if there is only one in 17 games, then that is not bad going."

HIGHS AND LOWS OF THE CUP: Dover's dream is over... until next year!

Pictures by ADY KERRY

WHAT ARE DOVER GOING TO DO WITH THEIR WINNINGS?

THE game is likely to have been the highest-earning ever played by Dover Athletic. Television rights alone netted the Whites £144,000 from the Football Association.

Dover also took a chunk of the gate receipts, which, with a packed Crabble stadium, would have been significant. Tickets sold out quickly and, with merchandise available, the Whites could quite easily have made £250,000 from the match – a sum which would have been likely to dwarf their previous paydays.

The team's chairman, Jim Parmenter, says the money should help the club rise up the ranks – but only if spent on the right things.

He said: "It was a great occasion with a full stadium and it was nice to see the supporters cheering us on. Hopefully some will be back for the league games. It was great for us to have a TV game.

"The money will be invested in making us more competitive over the next couple of years. It is up to me and the board to spend the money wisely."

While it's likely to be the board and chairman calling the shots on where the cash goes, manager Chris Kinnear knows what he'd like to see the money spent on.

He told KoS: "We never really needed the money, and I think that's why we've done well. We're playing for the glory rather than the cash as we haven't been in any financial difficulties.

"But, saying that, the money is great. I'd like to see it being spent on strengthening the squad, with money pumped into training and maybe better facilities too.

"New players could also be on a wish list, but really it's just every little aspect of the club.

"Everything we will do with the money will help to build the squad up, and that's what we want really, to keep playing the big games and succeeding as a club."

Medieval wife and moden woman share same fears for kids and work

‘Sometimes the problem with history taught in schools is that it looks at dates, and battles and so on, rather than how real, everyday people lived through these events.’ But that’s not the case with a new book by a Gravesend author and historian called The Medieval Housewife, writes Maria Chiorando...

JUGGLING work and childcare may seem like a modern dilemma, but the housewives of medieval Britain have more similarities to modern women than many might initially think.

This is according to Toni Mount, author of a book called The Medieval Housewife And Other Women Of The Middle Ages.

Ms Mount, who teaches history classes in Rochester and Gravesend, wrote the book after doing research for a novel.

She said: “I found the subject fascinating, and while I was researching I made lots of notes that I shared with some of my students.

“They loved the notes, and asked me to put together more for them. I did that, and then we self-published a book.

“I was talking to my publisher, and they asked about other projects I’d worked on - I told them about the book, and they asked me to produce a longer version.”

The book has gone down well, with many people finding the subject intriguing.

She said: “I think what people find interesting is to look at how ordinary people lived long ago. Sometimes the problem with history taught in schools is that it looks at dates, and battles and so on, rather than how real, everyday people lived through these events.

“As soon as you look at how the normal people lived, people are interested in making a comparison to our own lives, and often there are similarities - people are people.”

In medieval times, the role of housewife was a very respectable one.

Ms Mount, who lives in Gravesend, explained: “It was what every woman expected to be, unless she went into the church and became a nun, or her family was extremely wealthy and she wed for money and position.

“The average woman would expect to get married - but that didn’t mean that she wouldn’t work elsewhere. Many women had jobs as well as their duties in the home, often working with their husbands. Workshops could be part of the home, so childcare would not necessarily be the same issue that it is today.

“Women could even run a business and keep the profits, but then could not hide behind their husbands if their businesses incurred debts.

“There was more independence for women at this time than we might think. Things then began to change in the Tudor period - Henry VIII cut down on war, he didn’t like it as it was so expensive. This meant that there were more men around, so many jobs that women would have been doing started to go to men. Many employers liked hiring women as they could pay them less than men to do the same

THROUGH THE AGES: Toni Mount says medieval women had a lot of independence and could run businesses job, but after some law changes, men would be given jobs ahead of women in some cases.”

The grooming habits of medieval women is another area that shares similarities with our own habits.

Ms Mount says: “They would have found hazel twigs and frayed the ends to brush their teeth. There was also something called alum [a chemical compound in the form of crystals] which was used to put on insect bites, and was also quite effective as a deodorant.

“Women at the time also used tampons. Most women would use rags, which they would then wash and re-use, but some women were able to get hold of silk sponges from the Mediterranean, which are very soft. They would cut them to the right size and they could be washed and re-used. Women were still women - and they had the same concerns that we have now, of course.

“Hands and face were washed every day, and hands were definitely washed before every meal. Bathing also happened, but it was very time-consuming so the poorer people would not have had many, as their work would have taken up most of their day. They would have changed their undergarments daily, to stop their bodies and sweat coming into contact with their gowns, which were often woollen and hard to wash.”

Other fashions of the time included aprons.

“Everyone - including men - wore them,” said Ms Mount. “Women wore them as a badge of respectability - they would even wear them to church. King Edward IV even passed a law forbidding prostitutes from wearing aprons.”

In terms of the food they ate, it seems that medieval people had a sweet tooth.

Ms Mount said: “The poor people didn’t have much choice - it’s hard to work out exactly what they did eat. We think it’s lots of cheese, vegetables, bread, ale and, if they were lucky, bacon.

“The wealthier people would have had potatoes, turkey, tomatoes and aubergines. They ate a surprising range of food, including rice and pasta-type foods. They also enjoyed some really strange combinations, mainly sweet things alongside savoury things - that’s where we get things like pork and apple sauce from.

“They loved sugar, and would use it often - one of their recipes was to coat salmon in sugar, then bake it. They would peel off the sugar crust, and inside would apparently be a perfectly-cooked salmon.

“Their love of sugar and lack of toothpaste meant that by Tudor times, when sugar was cheaper, the rich had terrible teeth. Elizabeth I had the most dreadful rotten and black teeth - this started a trend among women to blacken their own teeth as it became fashionable.”

Following the interest in the book, Ms Mount has already finished her latest offering - a book about unravelling the mysteries of medieval medicine called Dragon’s Blood and Willow Bark, which is out in April.

Meet the top dog of canine agility

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A DOG trainer has made history at one of Britain's top agility contests.

Alan Bray, from Dartford, took the top prize for the second year running in the prestigious final for large dogs at the Kennel Club Olympia Agility Stakes – the first time it has ever been done.

And to cap off an amazing day, he even took third place too with a second dog.

He and prizewinning pet Indianna, known as Indie, beat hundreds of others and their handlers to win the final.

The six-year-old Border Collie has competed in agility contests with great success before.

He took part in qualifying heats across the country before winning the final, which is part of the London International Horse Show at Olympia.

Mr Bray also competed at the competition with Indie's mum Tayla, who at nine-years-old came in third place.

Afterwards, Mr Bray said: "Gaining two top three places for the first time ever in the history of agility at Olympia is a remarkable achievement especially as I am not getting any younger at 39.

"I'm very proud to make history, it feels unbelievable. I'm very proud of both my dogs and I couldn't do it without my partner Louise's support and thanks to my late wife who bred Indie."

He told us: "Winning Olympia is the pinnacle of dog agility sport, and is akin to winning the FA Cup."

"My partner Louise Challis and I are members of the Dartford Dog Training Club – we are immensely proud of this achievement to say the least."

He added: "The main difference in winning it this year over last year is that we have made agility history in first of all qualifying two dogs for the final for the first time ever, and then both finishing on the winners rostrum in front of 12,000 screaming fans."

"The noise when you are competing is like a football crowd inside the arena you just can't hear yourself speak so it's all done on body language and a good rapport with the dogs."

"To qualify for the final is a major achievement in itself as there are over 10,000 dogs from all over the world trying. You have to finish in the top five of a qualifying heat."

"And there are 10 heats held throughout the country and the 50 qualifying dogs from the 10,000 entered go onto a quarter-final held at the Kennel Club International Show in Northamptonshire in August. Then the top 35 go forward to Olympia for a nerve racking semi-final where the top 10 go through to the final on the Saturday night in front of a packed crowd who are encouraged to shout their support."

Mr Bray continued: "Indie is aged six and won it with her mum Tayla coming third. And this after having three litters which is a remarkable achievement."

Mr Bray has competed since discovering agility with his daughter Selena in 1990. Selena also competed at the recent Olympia event and so did Alan's youngest daughter Hayley.

Selena runs her own club called Fox Agility in Leicestershire and is a top handler and trainer in her own right. Alan's late wife Jayne bred all their dogs under the "Upanova" name, with many having gone on to become agility champions.

Mr Bray was awarded the top dog agility handler of all time recently by the Kennel Club having won more than 1,000 classes with several different dogs and all the available finals several times over, including Crufts and international events representing England and Great Britain.

Mr Bray will be the Crufts Championship judge this year which prevents him from representing England in the competitions there, but says he will be back in 2016.

Kennel Club secretary Caroline

Kisko said: "The Olympia agility stakes are one of the highlights of the dog agility calendar and have a very high level of talent competing each year."

"This year was no exception and we were impressed with the quality of the performances of all the dogs and handlers taking part. Congratulations to Alan, Indie and Tayla for their wonderful achievement."

PATRICK LAMB: Missing since the early hours of Saturday, December 13

CCTV: Patrick's last known movements in Maidstone town centre

Come home; or tell us you're okay

A heartfelt plea for information on the possible whereabouts of a Greenhithe man who went missing in Maidstone on December 12 has been made by his distraught girlfriend. She spoke to reporter Molly Kersey about her gratitude to the public and her devastation at his disappearance ...

THE girlfriend of missing man Patrick Lamb has thanked the public for their help searching for him, and urged anyone with information to come forward.

Mr Lamb, who lives in Greenhithe with his partner, went missing after a night out with two friends in Maidstone on Friday, December 12.

He had booked a room at the Grange Moor Hotel in St Michael's Road, Maidstone, but never returned.

His girlfriend Natasha Morgan said that as soon as she was told the 28-year-old had not come back, she knew something was wrong.

She told KoS: "I came down straightaway on the Saturday. I left work and I knew something wasn't right."

"We are searching anywhere. He could be anywhere by now, because it's completely out of character. You can't even think where he would go."

The couple met almost a decade ago.

"We have known each other for nine years, we went to university together and in the first year we lived together, and we have been together as a couple for six years," she said.

Since his disappearance, Mr Lamb's loved ones have been searching tirelessly.

Kent Police, Kent Search and Rescue, family, friends and even strangers have been helping.

A 'Help Find Patrick Lamb' Facebook page, which now has some 24,000 likes, is encouraging people across the county to put up posters in their area.

"The public have been amazing, overwhelmingly helpful and really lovely. Thanks from the bottom of my heart, from me and Pat's family," Ms Morgan said.

"It's the search team and the public that have been helping us most."

And Ms Morgan is determined to carry on looking.

"If anybody has information, come forward," she said.

"If he's listening - all his family and I love him very much and want him to come home, but if he can't come home, let somebody know that he's okay."

"If people are looking for him, by now he would probably have quite a full beard rather than being clean shaven."

Ms Morgan also said that if people thought they had seen Mr Lamb, taking a photograph would be very helpful.

CCTV captured a number of images of Mr Lamb, who was last seen in Fairmeadow at around midnight on

HAPPY: The couple

Saturday, December 13.

The images show him stumbling, sparking fears he may have hit his head and could be hurt.

An online petition has since been created to get the CCTV footage of Mr Lamb's last known movements onto television programme Crimewatch, which has garnered more than 5,000 signatures.

Ms Morgan said that previous attempts to get it featured on the programme had been unsuccessful as his disappearance is not being treated as a crime, but she is hoping that an exception can be made.

"A lot of people will watch something like Crimewatch and I believe we should get the CCTV everywhere," she said.

A spokesperson for Kent Police said: "Should Crimewatch want to run an appeal to find Patrick Lamb we can provide the relevant images and information."

"However, at this stage there is nothing to suggest a crime has taken place and Patrick's disappearance is not being treated as a criminal investigation."

Gareth Johnson, MP for Dartford, said: "I have met with Natasha, who is understandably devastated by Patrick's disappearance."

"It is good to see local people coming together to help try to find Patrick. This is an incredibly worrying situation for his whole family who desperately want to locate him."

Anyone with information can contact police on 101, visit www.ab-batalk.com/pat or the Facebook group Help Find Patrick Lamb. Alternatively, contact family searching for Mr Lamb on 07979 048416.

A-RATED SERVICE

A-Rated Company

"Sales representative was knowledgeable and helpful. Surveyor prompt and efficient. Fitters polite, personable and prompt. Standard of work first class. Very satisfied with our new windows."
Mr Brill, Ramsgate

"The initial sales representative was non pushy, explained the product and quoted exactly what we wanted. The surveyor was friendly and easy to chat too so there was no confusion over what we had ordered, he even suggested an improvement to make the visual appearance better. The fitters worked hard and cleaned up well after their days work. Really pleased with our new windows and they are so quiet. A well co-ordinated, professional company. Thank you."
T Godden, Chatham

"Sales representative explained everything very well, very friendly. Surveyor was friendly explained things we needed to know. Fitters were very friendly. Did a great job overall. Cleaned up very well before they left."
Mr & Mrs Robinson, Gillingham

"Following a call to your office for a quotation we had visits by sales representative, surveyor, followed by the installation team, all behaved in a very professional manner. The installation team arrived on time, carried out the installation without problem or mess. We are very satisfied with the work. Well done."
Mr & Mrs Davis, Snodland

A-Rated Windows

"Overall excellent service, from sales representative to fitment and aftercare. Windows and doors look great and we are both extremely happy and would definitely recommend Britelite."
Mr Davis, Woking

"A big thank you to everyone at Britelite especially our salesman, and the fitters who installed our windows. They were hard-working, professional guys. They are a credit to your company and our house now looks lovely and feels very secure. Many thanks."
Mr Speer, Slade Green

"We have been very impressed by every stage of our patio door installation. The price and quality of workmanship have been outstanding. The fitters were punctual, polite, clean and tidy and helpful."
Mr Goodman, Tonbridge

A-Rated Fitters

"The fitters were very good at explaining what they were doing and they were also very helpful. They worked extremely hard and the end results were brilliant. It was surprising how the house looks transformed when finished. Our whole experience with Britelite was very good. We are very pleased with the results."
Mrs Davidson, Chatham

"Overall the quality of the product and the installation is very good. The installation was carried out with the minimum of disruption given the extent of the works. It was really appreciated that your fitters explained how they proposed finished the trims etc. and sought our approval first rather than just doing it. Very pleased and would use you again."
Mr & Mrs Edwards, Bexhill on Sea

"A company is as good as the operatives who undertake the work to the complete satisfaction of the customer! The Britelite fitters fulfilled that role admirably, when they installed 10 windows and 2 patio doors for us. They were polite, accommodating, energetic, competent, humorous, worked efficiently as a team, paid attention to detail, were tidy and completed the work to our total satisfaction despite the inclement weather. We whole heartedly recommend their work."
Mr M. Maidstone

"Punctual; Weather was bad on the day but great care was taken to prepare and all floor surfacing was protected. Work was carried out quickly and efficiently. Fitted inner windows sills to width of our choice rendered and made good outside. Hoovered up and cleaned windows before leaving very pleased with workmanship."
D Lawrence, Mitcham

"The installation of my new front door went really smoothly, the fitter was really friendly and polite and completed the installation to a very high standard. I have been really impressed with everyone I have dealt with at Britelite. I will certainly recommend your services. Many thanks."
Mr McCafferty, West Drayton

A-Rated Service

"Very professional service from start to finish. Would definitely recommend to all friends and family and will use again when we have built our extension."
Mr & Mrs Grout, Sittingbourne

"I was very pleased with everything and the quality of service throughout was exceptional."
Mr Parish, Maidstone

AS SEEN ON ITV

"We are very satisfied with the service we received from the Britelite staff, in particular from the two fitters. They were very quick workers, who were very polite, helpful, efficient and friendly. Both my wife and myself are very pleased with the 7 windows they fitted and friends are asking about the triple glazing."
Mr Upton, Rochester

"I have used Britelite three times now and have recommended their services to a friend. You can tell when a company invests in it's staff. I really value excellent service. I like to do business with Britelite as all their staff value your custom and are courteous and efficient. Thank you Britelite."

THE WRITE WAY: Peter James has sold over 15 million novels

Look right into the mind of a bestselling crime novelist

Critically-acclaimed author Peter James to host post-show talk at Orchard Theatre

THE work of bestselling author Peter James will be making its way to Dartford this month (see next page).

The national tour of the stage-adaptation of his novel Dead Simple comes to The Orchard Theatre from January 14-17, and fans of the writer will be given the opportunity to attend an exclusive question and answer session with him.

This Q and A session will take place following the matinee performance on January 15.

Mr James has written 26 novels. Dead Simple, often considered to be his most popular work, was the first book to feature the character of Detective Superintendent Roy Grace.

The Roy Grace series has sold over 15 million copies, and has been translated into 36 languages worldwide.

This series has spawned seven consecutive UK Sunday Times number ones, as well as number ones in Germany, France, Russia and Canada. He is also a New York Times best-seller.

Mr James has served two consecutive terms as chairman of the UK Crime Writers' Association, and is currently Overseas Vice-President of International Thriller Writers in the USA.

Dead Simple play tells the story of Michael Harrison. He thinks he has it all; great career, good friends and a beautiful fiancée.

But when his stag night prank goes horribly wrong, Michael finds himself alone, buried alive and staring death in the face.

As time runs out and the terror grows, Detective Superintendent

Roy Grace tries to solve his mysterious disappearance, but begins to fear that Michael will never be found in time.

Olivier Award winner Ian Talbot directs.

The recognisable faces coming to Dartford include Tina Hobley who has graced TV screens for the last 12 years as ward sister Chrissie Williams in Holby City as well as roles in Coronation Street and Harbour Lights and was seen earlier this year in Celebrity Master Chef.

Joining her is award-winning TV actor Jamie Lomas who has starred for the last year in EastEnders as the murderous Jake Stone and before that as bad boy Warren Fox for five years in Hollyoaks.

Also on stage is Rik Makarem, best known for starring for four years in Emmerdale as well as Torchwood and who is a previous winner of the prestigious Laurence Olivier Bursary.

Michael McKell who starred for three years in Doctors as well as Emmerdale, MIT and on stage in Blood Brothers, Tonight's the Night and the Olivier winning Crazy for You also joins the cast at The Orchard.

And finally, Gray O'Brien, award-winning star of Coronation Street, Peak Practice and Casualty as well as Sleuth in the West End, will play the famous Detective Roy Grace.

Dead Simple promises to be a chilling, thriller that has all the classic suspense, twists and turns of a best-selling Peter James novel.

Darkness and plenty of plot twists on stage

By Maria Chiorando

THE audience can expect a dark script, and lots of unpredictable twists and turns in Dead Simple, according to leading man Jamie Lomas.

The star – best known for his turns in EastEnders and Hollyoaks took some time away from the rehearsal room to talk to KoS about the upcoming production, which opens on January 14 at Dartford's Orchard Theatre.

Dead Simple, which is adapted from the bestselling Peter James's novel, has a huge fanbase.

Mr Lomas says: "The script is brilliant, and very very dark, which is what attracted me to it.

"The producers got in touch with my agent, and said they'd like me to read for the part.

"I read the script, and knew that I had to be involved in it. It all clicked during the audition process, and I'm so happy to be onboard.

"It's a fantastic cast and an amazing director (Ian Talbot).

"With the success of Peter James's writing, there is some pressure to do the material justice, but I'm confident that it's all coming together well."

Better known for his small screen roles, stage is a new experience for Mr Lomas.

But the actor, who trained at the Manchester School of Acting, as well as in Canada, has always wanted to do it.

He says: "Switching from screen to stage is quite a big transition - the performance has to go from being as small as possible to being as big as possible, while still being real.

"It's a tough skill, but after coming out of a soap, I wanted to tackle a different challenge.

"With the national tour, I am throwing myself into the deep end a bit, but that's the life of an actor - and it's never boring.

"The rehearsal process is going really well, and the whole cast has gelled, which is good news, as we'll be touring together.

"They are all brilliant actors, and there is a lot of mutual respect."

Writer Peter James has also said how pleased he is with the casting of the play.

He said: "As a writer, all my characters begin in my mind. I flesh them out for the printed page.

"But nothing can compare to the joy of seeing them turn into real flesh and blood.

"All of them are actors I really admire and respect, and to see them come together, for the first time, at the read-through of the play was a truly magical experience for me."

With little time to go until opening night, the cast and crew are now putting together the finishing touches for the upcoming production according to Mr Lomas.

He says: "I hope people come down and support the production and support the venue.

"There's a great team behind it, so hopefully audiences will enjoy the play.

"The main thing I would say to anyone coming to see it is this: Expect the unexpected."

Dead Simple opens at The Orchard Theatre in Dartford on January 14 and runs until the 17.

For more information or to book tickets, visit orchardtheatre.co.uk or call the ticket office on 01322 220000.

A touch of culinary magic in this delicious children's puppet show

By Maria Chiorando

maria.chiorando@archant.co.uk

THEATRE of Widdershins brings new show – The Magic Porridge Pot and Other Tasty Tales – to the Gulbenkian Theatre in Canterbury later this month.

This show has three courses, the starter is the magic pot which won't stop producing porridge.

The main course is soup made from the most delicious stone in the world.

For pudding there is the very famous walking talking Gingerbread Man.

Accompanying these three popular stories is puppetry, pop-up sets and original music.

The Magic Porridge Pot and Other Tasty Tales follows Theatre of Widdershins' other productions The King's Got Donkey Ears, Arabian Nights, The Elves and the Shoemaker and Rapunzel and the Tower of Doom.

The company was formed in 1993 by Andy Lawrence and Penny Earey.

Mr Lawrence had been a props/costume designer and maker, mainly for the BBC, making such memorable costumes as a codpiece for 'Blackadder', a Tutankhamun headdress for Lenny Henry, and a two-legged camel for Little & Large.

Ms Earey had just finished running a nature reserve in London.

Theatre of Widdershins aims to creating high quality puppet theatre for children and their families.

The combination of table top puppetry, pop up set, storytelling and original music used in their productions has become their trademark.

The Magic Porridge Pot and Other Tasty Tales will be at Gulbenkian January 17.

The show starts at 2pm.

Children will have a chance to meet the puppets after the production has finished.

The production lasts for around 50 minutes.

It is suitable for ages 3+ and tickets are £7.50

Baby on lap (0-18months) tickets cost £1.

For more information and tickets please visit www.thegulbenkian.co.uk.

Think about making fish the catch of the day

Many people avoid eating fish, but with the wide variety available in the UK, it's worth giving it a try...

SMELLY, expensive, bony... fish doesn't always have the best reputation, but it's packed full of nutrients and there are many flavours to try.

Whether it was a whiffy, overcooked piece of haddock as a child that's put you off, or a plate plagued with bones, many people simply won't touch fish, no matter how many delicious-looking seafood dishes grace our TV screens on MasterChef.

As an island nation, we have a wide array of flavours swimming locally on our doorstep. It's high in protein, low in fat and needn't be too expensive or tricky to cook. And with so many different varieties, it's impossible to get bored.

So it's a wonder why, compared with our Mediterranean friends, we're a bit unenthusiastic about fish in Britain. I have several friends who won't touch it unless it's covered in breadcrumbs, chopped into familiar rectangle shapes and deep-fried.

A recent survey by Fish of the Day, the consumer face of the industry body Seafish, found most people in the UK (56% of adults) are falling short of the recommended two portions of fish per week.

Despite that, lots of people say looking after their health is a priority, with 39% planning on kicking off a better eating regime in the New Year.

If eating for health is your goal, looking to the seas for inspiration is a great place to start.

Known as 'brain food', oily fish like sardines, mackerel and salmon are packed full of Omega 3, and all types of fish and seafood are nutrient rich.

As well as Omega 3, vitamin D is another key components and in winter we can't rely on sunlight to keep levels topped up so it's essential that our diets contain it too.

Vitamin D is crucial for healthy bones, muscles and the immune system, while it's also been linked with helping prevent diseases like heart disease, bowel and breast cancer.

According to nutritionist Juliette Kellow, making this a reality needn't be too hard.

"Find the fishmonger counter at your local supermarket, they're the best people to give advice on all the different types of fish, and how to cook it," she says. "If you've never really cooked fish before, start with something familiar like cod, haddock or plaice, making sure it's responsibly sourced."

Most fish comes in handy, single portions or can be filleted by a fishmonger, so it won't take much, if any, preparation, and it can be cooked in mere minutes.

"Get experimenting, have a play, and build your confidence," Kellow says.

"If the kids are a bit resistant, start with homemade fish fingers or fishcakes.

"I used to make my little one a bit of mackerel mashed into some white fish, so he's growing up used to the taste of fish. Now he'll try anything."

A sticky adaptation

FOLLOWING a West End season, Scamp Theatre's adaptation of hit children's book Stick Man is coming to The Theatre Royal in Margate in April.

This show is most suitable for children aged 3+ with their friends & families.

Stick Man takes place on April 18 at 2pm.

Tickets cost £10, concessions £8 and a family of 4 is £30. Call 01843 292795 or visit www.theatreroyalmargate.com.

Sex, Baroque and roll

ROCKERS The Tiger Lillies will go on a national tour this year - and will be stopping off in Canterbury for a gig at the Gulbenkian Theatre on March 23.

The Grammy-nominated band, who count Simpson's creator Matt Groening amongst their fans are well-known for the Baroque performances and stage presence.

Chatback Comedy keeps laughs coming

By Maria Chiorando

maria.chiorando@archant.co.uk

THIS year marks Chatback Comedy's fifth birthday.

This comedy night began when a couple of students who were big comedy fans were invited to put on a one-off show at Canterbury's Parrot Pub.

Founder Lucy Dansen says: "We made the decision to create a professional comedy night featuring comedians we'd handpicked on the London comedy circuit.

"We decided the night should feature a local newcomer at every single show.

"Partly we wanted to start the company because I'm from London and missed going out to live comedy nights.

"We felt that such an enjoyable and affordable form of entertainment should be more present in Canterbury.

"Also the University of Kent features the only MA course in stand-up comedy in the UK.

"It seemed natural to us that there should be a night locally which allowed students on the course to hobnob with and watch comedians a step up the ladder from them."

Comedy, like all of the entertainment genres, is particularly difficult to crack, so it's no surprise to hear that those early days were plagued with doubts.

Ms Dansen says: "Despite all those lofty ideas we had no idea if we'd stay the course so it's unbelievably wonderful to find us doing just that five years on.

"The Parrot pub was our original, and remains our main, residency in Canterbury although we've also run shows on the Canterbury Fringe, at the Horsebridge Arts Centre in Whitstable, on the UKC campus and at the Gulbenkian Theatre.

"Last year we finally expanded to London where we also have a residency now.

"There have been lots of challenges over the past five years but we're lucky to have had a lot of support both from local audiences and also from students past and present at UKC.

"We've had lots of students from the MDrama and Theatre course doing work experience with us.

"Two of them, who have since graduated, now work for the company."

Over the five years, Chatback Comedy has experienced a series of unique challenges.

Ms Dansen says: "Some of our highlights have included running a festival featuring Milton Jones on the UKC campus.

"We also created our own show Stand Up & Slam and were invited to be a regular guest on BBC Radio Kent's The Conversation.

"We were shortlisted for two Canterbury Culture Awards, to mention just a few.

"At the moment we are looking forward to another five years in Canterbury. We hope to become more involved than ever with the local community and events.

"On January 22 we'll have our first gig of 2015 in Canterbury.

"This will also be five years (and three days) from our first ever gig in the very same room.

"We have an outstanding line up featuring Mae Martin, who has starred on Russell Howard's Good News, Archie Maddocks who was a finalist in the New Act of the Year category in Broadway Baby's 2014, awards"

■ Chatback Comedy's next Canterbury gig is at the Parrot Pub on January 22. Tickets cost £8 plus an 80p booking fee. Visit chatback-comedy.moonfruit.com.

Sissinghurst Castle

Shake off the cobwebs and kick the leaves with a visit to Sissinghurst Castle Garden this January and February. Learn more about the history hidden in the walls and see behind the garden gate with a Winter tour or pop in for some retail therapy and a cuppa.

Tours run at weekends from 3 January until 8 March between 11am - 3pm.

The Old Dairy coffee, book and plant shop is open seven days a week for you to warm up after a long walk around our estate too.

That Italian zest for better living

TRAVEL REVIEW: Sorrento

By Sarah Marshall

USING the same care and attention a jeweller might employ to handle precious stones, 68-year-old farmer Peppino Nunziata examines the plump, waxy lemons hanging from wooden pergolas in his 10,000 square metre garden.

"Lemons are very delicate, so they need a lot of looking after," he tells me, after deciding this particular bunch are not yet ready to be picked.

Every day, from 6.30am, Peppino works in his garden, preparing for a marathon seven harvests, which produce an impressive 2,500kg of lemons per year.

The only days he doesn't work are when it rains, he proudly tells me. And judging by the blinding sunshine seeping through gaps in the pergolas, that doesn't happen very often in this part of southern Italy.

Sadly, though, these fragrant, golden gems are no longer the high value commodity they once were; at one time Sorrento lemons were a lucrative export, but today the price is much lower.

In order to keep their business going and preserve an important part of the region's history, Peppino and his family have been forced to diversify, opening their property up to tourists as an agriturismo - a working farm where guests are literally granted a taste of local life, with many home-grown products served at the delicious dinner table.

The Italian government set up the concept in the 1980s, to give farmers a secondary source of income, thus maintaining the existence of farms and stopping a mass exodus of people from the countryside.

Set in the hills above Sorrento, with views of the island Capri and a coastline dotted with umbrella pines, it's hard to imagine that life here is ever hard graft.

Owned by the Nunziata family for four generations, the garden was first planted in the 17th century. Ida, Peppino's wife, tells me that lemon production in this region was started by the Jesuits in the 16th century, although the fruit was popular as far back as Roman times.

Now, most of the lemons the family produce are sold to a limoncello factory in Capri, one of the first places to bottle the syrupy, sweet digestif 20 years ago.

Sat on the terrace of the 15th century stone farmhouse, I'm given instruction on how to properly savour a shot of the drink, which I've always (apparently mistakenly) served straight from the freezer.

"Good limoncello should be cold but not freezing," Ida explains.

Naples, the gateway to Italy's enchanting southern coastlines, the city has - quite unfairly - been tarnished with a reputation for being dirty, rundown and dangerous. But for me, the former Spanish-ruled kingdom is the beating heart of Italy.

Giambelli coffee machines grind into action as baristas serve viscous, explosive strength espressos to loud, boisterous Neapolitans - no doubt providing rocket fuel for their wild gesticulations.

TRAVEL FACTS

G ADVENTURES (0844 272 2040; www.gadventures.co.uk) offer their seven-day Living Local Sorrento group tour exploring Pompeii, Capri, the Amalfi coast, Sorrento and Naples, from £999pp.

Price includes most meals, accommodation, transport and local guides (flights extra).

I walk along Spaccanapoli, the street which famously splits Naples in two. Some of the tufa-brick buildings are so close, residents can even reach out and touch their neighbours.

To my amusement, one souvenir stall I pass sells toilet rolls emblazoned with pictures of Silvio Berlusconi - proof, if ever needed, that the shamed former PM's career is heading down the toilet.

The street is also famous for stocking Christmas decorations year-round, with artisans making miniatures for the popular Italian presepe (nativity sets). Alongside Jesus, Mary and Joseph, I'm surprised to find models of that other revered deity, Maradona, who once played for Napoli.

As I sit down for another pizza, an eccentric performer turns up on a customised Tim Burton-esque scooter to entertain diners. He's the epitome of Naples' often offbeat, humorous charm.

I remember Ida's advice and order my shot of limoncello chilled but not frozen.

Despite my self-consciousness, sunburned shoulders and fragmented Italian, I'm confident I might just have passed for being a local.

Film Reviews by Damon Smith

INTO THE WOODS
(PG, 125 mins) Musical/Comedy/
Drama/Romance

TRADITIONALLY in fairy tales, the bedraggled heroine wins her dashing prince, evil stepmothers get their comeuppance and abducted children escape the clutches of a witch by pushing the treacherous hag into her oven.

Into The Woods keeps turning the pages on these archetypal characters, imagining what might happen as they come to terms with their actions and - in most cases - suffer the repercussions.

Everything has a price, especially your heart's desire, so be careful what you wish for.

Rating 7/10

FOXCATCHER
(15, 134 mins) Drama/Romance

FOXCATCHER (see picture) is a dark and unsettling character study, in which the American dream turns rancid and a mentally unstable man with money becomes a wrecking ball in the lives of unsuspecting bystanders.

The leading man, Steve Carell is impressive but arguably the more compelling performances come from Channing Tatum and Mark Ruffalo as the siblings corrupted by a millionaire's insidious influence.

The homoerotic undertow of Du Pont's fascination with Mark is subtly addressed in a script that doesn't quite make sense of the complex emotions churning beneath the surface.

Too much is left unsaid and with a running time of 134 minutes, director Bennett Miller leaves us with a lot of unanswered questions.

(12A, 109 mins) Action/Thriller/
Romance

HISTORY repeats with predictably calamitous consequences in Olivier Megaton's high-octane thriller Taken 3.

In previous films, former Special Forces operative Bryan Mills (Liam Neeson) single-handedly brought down an Albanian human trafficking ring and its underworld offshoots.

He left devastation and an impressive double-digit body count in his wake.

Surely, the east European criminal fraternity would have learnt that Mills and his family are off-limits. Alas, the Russians haven't received that memo because they foolishly try their luck against the hulking avenger in this frenetically edited instalment.

Taken 4 A Ride is surely just a matter of time.

AS the RSPB, birdwatchers and gardeners nationwide gear up for the charity's annual Big Garden Birdwatch, the organisation is warning that birds that have benefited from a mild autumn will begin to struggle as the weather changes.

Findings from the 2014 event, in which almost half a million people recorded the birds they saw over the two days, revealed some interesting changes among our most popular garden birds.

Blue tits emerged in their highest position since Big Garden Birdwatch began and were the second most frequently seen species. The previous occupiers of the second spot, blackbirds, dropped to number four.

Goldfinches climbed another place since the previous year and reached number seven, while the robin dropped back to number 10. There was also a new entrant to the top 20 - the great spotted woodpecker, for the first time ever, at number 20.

As well as asking the public to record their findings - with the help of identification pictures available on the RSPB website www.rspb.org.uk - the organisation is also asking people to do their bit to protect our birds through the winter by topping up their bird feeders and providing fresh water and shelter for wildlife in their gardens during the frosty weather.

The nature charity says there are three things that birds will need this winter: food, unfrozen water and shelter.

In chilly weather, birds will appreciate a variety of food, but fatty food will be especially helpful. For example, fat balls, or homemade bird cakes made with lard and packed with seeds, fruit or dried mealworms are great treats to put out in your garden.

Kitchen scraps will work well, and a recipe for successfully feeding birds over winter might include chopped fat from unsalted meat, cheese, dried fruit and pastry.

Unfrozen water for drinking and bathing may be hard for birds to find when there's been a frost, but with a simple trick you can help to keep a patch of water ice-free.

Float a small ball, such as a ping-pong ball, on the surface of the water. Even the lightest breeze will keep it moving and stop an area of the water freezing.

Finally, provide shelter by planting dense hedges such as privet or hawthorn, or letting ivy or holly grow. These all provide great cover for birds to roost in.

Nestboxes can also be good roosting sites, and roofs are a popular spot for birds trying to keep warm. If birds are getting into a hole in your roof and you need to get the hole fixed, consider putting up a nestbox to replace the gap.

RSPB wildlife advisor Richard James says: "People can make a real difference to garden birds and improve their chances of surviving the winter.

"Birds don't need much and by providing a supply of food, a patch of unfrozen water and somewhere to shelter from the elements, you will be rewarded with great views of wildlife in your back garden."

Putting the record straight

IN response to Mr Peter Medwell of Broadstairs and his totally misinformed letter of last week in relation to Cllr Clive Hart, the former Thanet District Council Leader.

Firstly, Mr Medwell very cleverly chose not to mention in his letter, that during the public meeting he referred to, Roger Gale MP had wholeheartedly thanked Clive for his support with the Manston Task Force and furthermore, that Clive in his own speech, also confirmed he stood 'shoulder to shoulder' with our two local Thanet MPs to support Manston and its retention as an airport.

However, what has really incensed me is that as with virtually every other scheduled council meeting or public event for more than a decade, my husband, Cllr Clive Hart, had arranged our own private domestic appointments to fit around his extremely busy councillor role that day.

He most certainly did not leave the meeting at the Winter Gardens 'early' as Mr Medwell suggests, indeed, the meeting was scheduled to finish considerably earlier and was extended by an hour, the vast majority of which we stayed for. Consequently my husband and I left much later than we had originally planned and for the record, some considerable time after both MPs had actually left.

I remember the afternoon very clearly because I became extremely concerned and distressed that we were getting very late to pick up our grandson, as previously arranged with my daughter.

Clive's undoubted commitment to Thanet is one thing but our joint commitment to our family and in particular the safety and wellbeing of our young grandchildren is also a major priority.

I therefore sincerely hope Mr Medwell will contact my husband to apologise for his totally misconstrued and now publicly made allegations.

Cllr Sandra Hart,

NSPCC in need of volunteers

I WOULD like to take this opportunity to thank all of your readers who have supported the work of the NSPCC during the last year. Without the backing of local people the NSPCC would not be able to help abused children rebuild their lives, or be there for parents who desperately need advice and support.

As we move into 2015 I would like to appeal to your readers to make a very special kind of New Year's resolution for the NSPCC. 'Just One Day' is a call for people to come forward and volunteer some

LETTER OF THE WEEK

Have a say on the Right to Light issue

WHY does KCC believe one person's safety is more important than another?

Please sign this on-line petition – we need 10,000 signatures to make KCC review its part street light policy and switch our lights back on for everyone's safety – go to the KCC website, search e-petitions, Right to Light e-petition. Or visit <https://democracy.kent.gov.uk/mgepetitionlistdisplay.aspx?bcr=1>

Many signatures have already been collected, please add your voice to this important issue.

KCC has switched off 70,000 of 120,000 street lights, plunging many residential areas into total darkness, it says to save £1 million a year, but it has cost £4.2 million to implement so will take over four years to payback, there are other issues to:

What about the safety of people walking home or going to work, many work irregular hours (hospital workers, emergency services, shift workers) and are out at all hours? We live in a 24-hour society, their safety is being risked by roads plunged into darkness from possible accidents from tripping on uneven pavements or obstacles, or from road accidents or crime.

KCC's decision is discriminatory – lights are off in some roads but not others – left on in shopping and town centres and universities, but not residential roads. KCC surely has a duty to provide services equally as we all pay rates. Residents without lighting are subsidising those who do and are also disadvantaged in health, safety and potential exposure to increased crime.

There is also an increased crime potential – it is a burglar's charter, encouraging criminals to target unlit areas to burgle and escape in total darkness, and increases threat of personal violence, muggings and rapes. Then there is increased stress from fear of attack with many elderly and disabled feeling unsafe in their own homes

Residents are being forced to install, or leave on, personal external lighting at considerable extra cost, which again is unfair and discriminatory.

Street lighting is a basic service and basic necessity – KCC's switching it off is totally unacceptable. KCC has decided to install LED lighting, but will not confirm when it is installed whether it will switch all the lights back on. Installation will take years and people's safety is at risk until then.

Also, if the council knew it was going to install LED lighting, why has it wasted £4.2 million of ratepayers' money to implement the 'part light' scheme, which it will never recover in energy cost savings during the period before switching to LED lights?

J Cole,

time to support our work – even if people can only spare one day, it will be a massive help.

There are many different ways that people can volunteer their time including helping out with admin at one of our offices; becoming an NSPCC ChildLine Schools Service volunteer; becoming a ChildLine helpline counsellor; getting involved in an event by setting up stalls or taking photographs, or cheering-on NSPCC participants in a sporting race or activity.

In Kent, we especially need fundraising volunteers. So whether you're interested in running a marathon, running a stall at a local fete, or just sparing a few hours to help at a collection, we would love to hear from you.

Abuse ruins childhood, but it can be prevented. That's why the NSPCC is here. That's what drives our work, and that's why – as long as there's abuse the NSPCC will fight for every childhood.

Please join us in the fight for every childhood by volunteering some time to support the NSPCC, whether you can spare a day a week or just one day. To find out more call 0203 188 3932 or log on to nspcc.org.uk/volunteer.

More people will realise the truth

I WRITE in reply to the letter from Rosie Sprigg of Canterbury, KoS Letters 28/12/14.

Without UKIP there would have been no discussion regarding the EU web we are entrapped within.

Without UKIP the disguised deceit we are entangled with would not have been made manifest. Without UKIP, thousands of those who could 'see the big picture' would have had no representation.

Many thank UKIP that the public is slowly awakening from their brain washed stupor. Realising now the truth of our awful situation.

Far from praying that "they should be shown the door", no Rosie Sprigg of Canterbury, we need to pray earnestly that many more of our right-thinking people will realise the truth.

Incidentally, if UKIP could afford to subject parties to the same amount of electronic scrutiny that they are exposed to, I shudder to think of what they would turn up.

June Moore,
Tunbridge Wells

Drone air threat poses danger

I AM writing in response to your piece about possible drone strikes over Dungeness.

If this is the case, why are we not hearing more about it? Terrorists are becoming increasingly sophisticated in their methods, and in this age of fear, we must do all we can to protect ourselves.

I am not aware of what security precautions the power station has in place: I would expect these to stay top-secret.

The drone flights mentioned in the article were not thought to have had any malicious intent: I hope that this is the case, otherwise the damage that unmanned flying objects could cause to our power source is truly unthinkable.

Unique cruises on the river Medway

THE Kentish Lady offers a unique experience of the River Medway, from one-hour trips at weekends and school holidays to three-hour cruises during the week - and is also the perfect setting for your private party.

The one-hour trips are perfect for the family and the adult-only three-hour cruises (which must be booked in advance) through Farleigh Lock include a picnic box or fish and chips. There is even a licensed bar on board if you fancy a tittle along the way.

Kentish Lady River Medway Boat Trips offer you a fantastic opportunity to shop in Maidstone town centre by boat! You can Park & Sail, and use the river to visit Kent Life, The Malta Inn and Whatman Park - Maidstone's millennium park.

If you have a little time to wait for the next cruise, you can visit the refreshment kiosk where you will find hot and cold drinks, cupcakes and cookies, sweets and ice cream - a well-deserved treat!

As the river weaves its way through Maidstone there is history around every corner. Take in the sights and splendour of this great county town from the comfort of your own seat aboard the Kentish Lady river boat.

The River Medway provides a beautiful backdrop and the Kentish Lady can cater for every occasion, from disco parties, wedding receptions, birthdays and anniversaries to social gatherings.

We provide a wide variety of buffet choices and can arrange entertainment and decorate the boat for your special occasion. There is even a licensed bar on board.

Gift vouchers: Why not treat someone special to an unusual and thoughtful gift? Three-hour cruise vouchers are available for purchase any time throughout the year. To purchase your voucher please call 01622 753740.

Of course, our licensed bar will be open if your fancy something a little stronger, that is until the bar staff have to do the locks!

Our well-stocked bar serves a wide variety of drinks, including wine, spirits, alcopops, draught and bottled beer, soft drinks, hot beverages and snacks. Our bar tariffs are similar to pub prices.

One-hour trips run from March to December; and three-hour trips run from April to October. Private hire is from April to September. See our website for full details: www.kentishlady.co.uk.

DJ Interiors - the secret is out!

ESTABLISHED in the year 2000, DJ Interiors has grown from a one-man fitting service to the complete, bespoke flooring company.

Catering for industries such as estate agents, care homes, building developments and pharmaceutical firms, the company has also worked on specialist projects for multi-million-pound yachts in Cannes and Monaco and is frequently requested back to work at the Cannes Film Festival.

Currently its work is being showcased on Grand Designs, reflecting the quality craftsmanship it offers to all its customers, whether domestic or commercial.

Whatever it is, DJ Interiors has you covered: from full refurbishments to hygienic wall cladding, from safety flooring to Axminsters, from landlord cord to luxury vinyl tiles, there really is something to suit everyone at an affordable price.

Its prices are all-inclusive too, so there are no nasty hidden charges at the end.

Over the past 14 years, all of DJ Interiors' work has been generated as a direct result of a referral. Its work has always done the selling and as such the company has operated as a 'best kept secret' passed on by happy customers. The firm's staff pride themselves on their levels of service and only sign off a job if they would be happy with it in their own homes.

So now the secret is out. Call the company at its showroom. The staff would love to talk to you about any grand designs you have and give you advice on how best to achieve your plans at a suitable budget. They look forward to hearing from you soon.

Glebe Fencing Ltd can tick the boxes for your fencing, decking, gates and pergola needs

IT'S A New Year, a fresh start and a clean slate. Do you plan to achieve everything on your newly-written DIY to-do list?

Here at Glebe Fencing Ltd, we always see a rise in trade early in the New Year as people buy all their fencing, decking and gate supplies with all the intentions to fit them. Soon after that we then receive calls asking for installation quotes.

So, if you have added fencing, or decking, gates or pergolas to your list, maybe Glebe Fencing Ltd could help tick those boxes for you?

We offer a free site survey and fixed price quotations so there will be no unwanted surprises. All quotations are valid for three months from the date of survey, giving you time to consider or compare the quote without the worry of time constraints.

Glebe Fencing Ltd has grown from the traditions of a sole trader to a company that now services the whole of Kent and beyond.

Maintaining the values that were the foundations of growth, you'll be sure to receive great advice from experienced fencers who have the added benefit of stocking their own panels and materials, ensuring you get comprehensive service with just the one call.

With Glebe Fencing Ltd, you can buy on-line, buy direct and most importantly, buy in confidence.

Transforming lives ... all year and every year!

CHRYSALIS Care – transforming lives this New Year ... all year and every year.

Chrysalis Care has celebrated many New Years since it started providing foster placements for children and young people in 1997.

It's the time of year for reviewing and evaluating goals and plans, often with hopes for a better life - and Chrysalis Care have always strived for better lives for the children and young people they provide foster care for.

Being placed with the right family, at a time when they need it most, can make all the difference to the life experience of a child or young person and can actually help to transform their lives.

As an Ofsted-rated 'outstanding' organisation, we know that without our diverse foster carer team, we could not fulfil our ethos of transforming the lives of children.

Whatever time of year, children come into the care system for all sorts of reasons with needs that are individual to their experiences, so we need foster carers from a range of cultural, religious and ethnic backgrounds, mixed age groups and both single people and couples.

If you want to know more about becoming a fully-trained foster carer, receiving 24-hour support, and have a spare room and also room in your life to offer a child or young person, we are waiting to hear from you and to answer your queries.

If this New Year you want to make a difference, please call 0208 2982800, email info@chrysaliscare.org or visit chrysaliscare-fostering.org.

Dedicated therapeutic family-based care for children and young in England by ISP

ISP is an independent fostering agency established in 1987 which practises dedicated therapeutic family-based care for children and young people in England.

We arrange fostering for children in ISP-approved foster families. The all-important relationship between foster families and young people is underpinned by a therapeutic, multi-disciplinary approach with expertise in social work, therapy, education and fostering. In our therapeutic fostering, carers have appropriate experience, knowledge, understanding and empathy and use everyday caring experiences to help children thrive and develop. With extensive support, our carers work with young people who at times display extreme behaviours and emotions, helping them to live in stable, nurturing family placements.

Our foster carers come from various ethnic, social, racial and cultural backgrounds. Some are married, some are single and some are in long-term relationships.

Many foster carers have children of their own although this is not a requirement, however, carers must be able to demonstrate a good understanding of how the needs of children who are fostered may differ from those who live with their own families.

Life as an ISP foster carer is rarely predictable. Each young person arrives with their own distinctive personality, challenges and needs. Extensive support is provided, however carers do need deep reserves of determination, flexibility and resilience.

We are particularly interested in respite-only carers.

We have centres in Kent, London, Buckinghamshire, Milton Keynes and Sussex. We have also started recruiting in the Solent area.

If you would like to find out more please contact our Fostering Team on 0800 0857 989 or fostering.team@ispchildcare.org.uk or visit our website www.ispchildcare.org.uk.

COULD YOU FOSTER?

Make 2015 your year to shine – enrol on a course at Bromley College now

If you want to make a difference to your life in 2015 then why not look at the many opportunities available to you at Bromley College this January?

With more than 20 new courses to choose from, now is the perfect time to develop your skills and improve your career prospects in 2015. We are launching some new courses aimed directly at 16 to 18-year-olds who are still deciding on their next course of study, or who have decided to change direction from the course they are on.

These are full-time courses and open to any young person who is still required to be in education, employment or training.

We have an exciting range of access courses for adults who want to gain the qualifications to go to university.

These courses are eligible for funding for over-24s through 24+ Advanced Learning Loans, which means there are no upfront fees and you only pay back when you are earning over £21,000 per year.

If you complete a relevant degree you won't have to pay the Access loan back at all.

You can also study up to degree level at Bromley College, where hundreds of students are already studying in our dedicated Higher Education and Professional Centre where the high standards of teaching and small class sizes make learning close to home an enviable experience.

Our new Hospitality, Food and Enterprise College is offering an entry-level programme for those wanting a career in catering. We are also running a series of short courses, for those who want to develop their home cooking skills.

Principal Sam Parrett says: "It's been an exciting year here at Bromley College of Further and Higher Education. From the launch of our 14-16 college this September, to the opening of our brand new £4.5m sports centre, we have had a huge amount to celebrate.

"As well as our high success and retention rates, students will also benefit from our recently launched Bromley Advantage programme. This is aimed at helping our students to develop employability and communication skills – which are crucial to a successful future career.

"We have courses for people of all ages and all abilities. Simply take a look at what we have to offer and enrol today at www.bromley.ac.uk."

Celebrating pupils' A-level results at Norton Knatchbull

STUDENTS, parents and staff at the Norton Knatchbull School gathered to celebrate their A-level results. In total, our students achieved 22% A* or A grades, and 50% A*, A or B grades.

Our overall pass rate was 99.7%. The vast majority of our students will continue their studies at university and have already received firm offers of a place. The average point score per student was 847.94.

There are a number of students whose achievements are exceptional across all A2 subjects they studied, and who therefore deserve particular praise: Callum Shaw achieved A* grades in all of Further Mathematics, Mathematics, Chemistry, Physics and English Literature; Christy Varghese achieved A* grades in Mathematics and Psychology and two A grades in Biology and Chemistry; Ryan Cherry also achieved A* grades in Sociology and Psychology, an A grade in Physical Education and a C grade in Biology; Justin Bean achieved an A* grade in Geography and A grades in Fine Art, Mathematics and Physics; Edward Potter achieved an A* grade in Psychology and A grades in Sociology, Music and Chemistry; Shanice Evans achieved an A* grade in Sociology, B grades in English Language and Literature, Government and Politics and Psychology, and a B grade in the AQA Extended Project.

In addition to the above, the following students must be congratulated for gaining an A* grade in one of the A2 subjects they studied: Harry Middleton (Government and Politics); Christopher Morley (English Literature); Maisie Newman (Sociology); Michael Parrett (Mathematics); Oliver Potter (Chemistry); Aidan Shell (Psychology); George Tickner (Russian).

new year new you!

Sixth Form Open Evening

on 19th January 2015 6pm to 8pm

The Norton Knatchbull School is a popular and highly regarded selective school for boys aged 11-18 which admits a growing number of girls into its Sixth Form. Having proudly served the local community of Ashford in Kent since the 17th century, we combine traditional values with a forward-looking and vibrant learning environment where young people are nurtured to become considerate, confident and well-rounded individuals.

"There are so many excellent extra-curricular activities... I've lost count... all of which are superb."
W7 student

We provide an atmosphere in which all our students feel supported and inspired to strive for their personal best. Our approach to academic study is varied, disciplined and fosters a life-long love of learning. We value community and celebrate diversity. As a result, our young people are able to make informed and positive life choices, and are equipped to face the challenges of a fast-changing, competitive and increasingly global environment.

We are proud of our track record of strong examination results, the wealth of our extra-curricular provision and the strength of our careers education, advice and guidance. We benefit from a wide range of facilities which support learning in a variety of disciplines, styles and environments. Our specialisms model innovation and best practice across the school and maintain productive links with local schools and the wider national and international community.

Our students are supported by a team of highly qualified, hard-working and caring teaching and support staff and a well informed and supportive Governing Body, all of whom are united in their desire to achieve the best possible outcomes for all.

Basepoint Folkestone's Business Centre is the place to look for easy-in and easy-out office space

AN economic upturn is being felt at Basepoint Folkestone. Basepoint Folkestone, which offers business accommodation in offices and workshops, is going from strength to strength. It has now been open for nearly 13 years and has given a home to more than 300 businesses over the years.

Supplying their business units on an easy-in, easy-out basis, Basepoint has been able to give businesses the option to stay for as long as they like from just one month up to over 12 years, as several businesses have opted for.

This has allowed the businesses currently at the Business Centre to grow, which has been happening frequently over the last few months, along with brand new companies taking up the offer.

Other services provided at Basepoint are meeting rooms for up to 32 people, an on-site café, photocopying, faxing, telephones and fast internet.

Everything a business should need without the hassle of dealing with it. Leave that to the management staff!

The centre also provides free networking events for both tenants and external companies to promote business and collaboration.

The Networking Hub Group meet every other month, providing informal networking, lunch and a short presentation on a business topic – all free.

The centre is nearly full, with only two offices currently available, so if you would like to be located at the busy, professional, friendly Business Centre, please call Lorraine or Caroline on 01303 298298, drop by Monday to Friday to view, or find out more at www.basepoint.co.uk.

Don't get in a mess over MOSS – is the advice from DSH

DON'T get in a mess over MOSS. An apparently small but significant change to VAT took place on January 1, 2015, which may prove costly for unprepared businesses.

The change introduces new EU rules on the 'place of supply' of services in relation to business to consumer (B2C) supplies of digital services, such as broadcasting, telecommunications and e-services.

Previously these supplies had been taxable in the location of the supplier, ie you could hold a single VAT registration in the UK (assuming you are established here) and charge UK VAT on all of these supplies.

However, from January 1, 2015, the same supplies are now taxable in the location of the consumer, with tax charged at the VAT rate applicable in the consumer's EU member state.

In order that UK-based suppliers of digital services do not have to register for VAT in every EU member state where they have customers, HMRC has developed a Mini-One-Stop-Shop (MOSS) service.

This is an electronic system that allows businesses to register in only one EU member state and submit a single VAT return and payment each quarter for all their cross-border supplies of 'digital services'.

Determining which e-services are 'digital services' for the purposes of the new rules can be difficult, and businesses may also find gathering evidence of their customers' locations something of a challenge.

Submitting a late MOSS registration will force businesses to register for VAT in multiple jurisdictions, which can be costly.

DSH is on hand to help and advise you on all aspects of VAT and Indirect Taxes, so contact us today on 01622 690666 for an informal chat.

REVITALISED: The revived Viva (main picture) will be arriving soon, while Vauxhall's new three-cylinder turbo engine has boosted the Corsa supermini as well as giving the misfiring Adam (below in chunky Adam Rocks version) the powertrains it deserves

Vauxhall – the small car champion?

IS Vauxhall's aim to move upmarket about to be driven more by small cars than bigger models like the Insignia?

Worthy though the Insignia is - it is a former European Car of the Year, after all - there are signs that the latest Corsa supermini, highly customisable Adam three-door, and forthcoming Viva city car are the models really polishing the General Motors brand's image.

Even allowing for Vauxhall's impressive clout in the fleet sector, the previous Corsa remained a favourite even up to the moment it was replaced.

And though the new version is evolutionary rather revolutionary in its styling, it does feel well-made and now has a good engine line-up, including a new turbocharged three-cylinder petrol unit, offering four-cylinder smoothness and response without that format's greater weight or fuel consumption.

This engine should also re-energise the premium packaged Adam; Vauxhall's MINI and Fiat 500 rival in the image-conscious 'handbag/manbag' segment has been hamstrung by lacklustre power and handling.

The unit will also power the eagerly-awaited

Viva. This famous old model name died in 1979, succeeded first by the Chevette and then the Astra name, but now revived to adorn a car two sectors below its original place in the line-up while carrying over its market pitch as a no-nonsense runabout.

The newcomer - due 'in the spring' is about all

Vauxhall will say at present - has a five-door body highlighted by two exaggerated creases on the upper part of the doors and another version of the 'blade' motif that has given the brand's current line-up such a stylish boost.

The Viva will also naturally major on variants of the aforementioned three-cylinder.

Third time lucky for the Nissan X-Trail

Having started it all, the Japanese marque wants the new X-Trail to seal its reputation as THE brand for crossovers, writes Steve Loader...

NISSAN'S X-Trail was always a cut above 'soft-roader' rivals like the Toyota RAV4 and Honda CR-V, because it actually could cope with a bit of rough terrain.

But generations one and two also had pugnacious looks to go with that role, which is perhaps why last year's replacement is a more stylish beast likely to sell in greater numbers, while preserving some off-road ability in the 4x4 versions.

It's probably no accident either that the inventor of the crossover segment, with its original big-selling Qashqai and bug-eyed Juke baby sister, now wants the X-trail to become big brother to both of them.

Nissan has also come up with a major budget saver: the previous Qashqai used to be offered as a standard five-seater or stretched 'seven-up' model.

But this new X-Trail offers 5-7 seats within the same bodyshell for those who really must have seven aboard, allowing Nissan to dispense with the old Qashqai +2.

The new X-Trail is available in both front-wheel drive (FWD) or 4x4 formats, the former catering for people who want high-riding SUV/crossover style plus economy.

The FWD option keeps prices sensible too: from £22,995 for the entry-level five-seat Visia variant - £2,600 less than its predecessor. For those wanting 4x4, this starts at £26,495.

A premium cabin, plus safety and driver aids are a major feature of the new car: even entry-level Visia trim is offered with a Smart Vision Pack, for a modest £495.

For now, engine choice is limited to a single 130PS (128bhp) 1.6-litre diesel with so-so CO2 emissions of 129g/km, but decent performance - as good as the previous two-litre variant says Nissan. In FWD manual format it will return a potential 57mpg on the official combined cycle, providing you don't exploit the smooth and refined power and well-managed handling - it's quite agile for a large and relatively tall car.

But it is the newcomer's crossover flexibility that wins most friends, with various passenger and loading options. A double load floor allows up to nine configurations, notably the creation of upper and lower areas with a simple single-handed move.

In its topmost position, the floorboard can hold up to 10 kilograms of luggage, or 75 kilograms in its middle position. This enables the user to store, for example, a baby buggy and large items below while creating an upper load surface for smaller items or shopping.

Access to the luggage area has also been made easier with remote operation of the power tailgate, a classy touch that will further worry expensive German premium rivals, already concerned by the Qashqai's upmarket appeal.

Top 10 Tips for writing a CV

Before you send off your CV or upload it to a job board you need to be 100% confident you are putting your best foot forward.

- 1 Check and double check grammar and spelling
- 2 Exaggeration - Don't be tempted to invent qualifications or embellish the extent of your work experience.
- 3 Keep it concise and clear - Less is more. Aim for two pages, maximum.
- 4 No repetition - Always check that you haven't used the same words for describing different skills, work experience, or interests.
- 5 Tailor Your CV - Don't be tempted to send the same CV to a large number of employers. Tailoring it will give you a better chance of success.
- 6 Presentation - Use a commonly used font such as Times Roman or Arial
- 7 Highlight achievements - Remember the purpose/goal of the CV is to get the interview - it needs to stand out and help you sell yourself.
- 8 Back up with examples - Try to include examples of any skill or achievement. This will give an employer an idea of how you have used your skills.
- 9 Use your friends and family - Get someone to proof read your CV.
- 10 Keep it fresh - Update your CV whenever you've gained more experience.

HIGHWAYS

THE M2 MOTORWAY JUNCTIONS 1 - 2 TEMPORARY OVERNIGHT CLOSURES

Notice is hereby given that the Secretary of State for Transport has made an Order on the M2 Motorway, in the County of Kent, under section 14(1)(a) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 because works are proposed to be executed on the road.

The effect of the Order is to authorise the overnight closure of the following:

- (a) the coastbound carriageway of the M2 between the tip of the nosing of the 'off' slip road at Junction 1 (A289) and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 2 (A228);
- (b) the Londonbound carriageway of the M2 between the tip of the nosing of the 'off' slip road at Junction 2 (A228) and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 2 (A289);
- (c) the slip road leading from the coastbound carriageway of the M2 at Junction 2; and
- (d) the slip road leading to the Londonbound carriageway of the M2 at Junction 2.

These measures are in the interests of road safety to enable contractors to undertake resurfacing, road marking, reinstatement of studs and all associated carriageway works.

It is expected that the work will last for approximately 3 weeks starting on or after Monday 2nd February 2015 between 20:00 and 06:00.

The Order will come into force on 31 January 2015 and have a maximum duration of eighteen months.

During the closures outlined above, traffic affected will be diverted via the A289, A2 and the A278.

The carriageway closures, slip road closures and diversion routes will be clearly indicated by traffic signs when they are in operation during the works periods.

M2 MOTORWAY JUNCTIONS 4 - 6 TEMPORARY TRAFFIC RESTRICTIONS

Notice is hereby given that the Secretary of State for Transport has made an Order on the M2 Motorway, in the County of Kent, under section 14(1)(a) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 because works are proposed to be executed on the road.

The effect of the Order is -

- (a) to impose an overnight temporary mandatory 50mph speed restriction on -
 - (i) the eastbound carriageway of the M2 between Forge Lane overbridge and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 5 (A249),

- (ii) both carriageways of the M2 between Primrose Lane overbridge and 1004 metres east of Sawpit Road overbridge,
 - (iii) the eastbound carriageway of the M2 between the tip of the nosing of the 'off' slip road at Junction 6 (A251) and Selling Road overbridge,
 - (iv) the westbound carriageway of the M2 between Selling Road overbridge and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 6 (A251), and
 - (v) the westbound carriageway of the M2 between Vinsons Farm underbridge and Bull Lane;
- (b) to authorise the overnight closures of the following:
- (i) in phases the eastbound carriageway of the M2 between the tip of the nosing of the 'off' slip road at Junction 4 (A278) and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 6 (A251),
 - (ii) the westbound carriageway of the M2 between the tip of the nosing of the 'off' slip road at Junction 6 (A251) and the tip of the nosing of the 'on' slip road at Junction 4 (A278), and
 - (iii) all slip roads leading to and from the carriageways described at (b)(i) and (b)(ii) above; and

(c) to authorise overnight hard shoulder running on both carriageways of the M2 between points 500 metres east and 500 west of Bottom Pond underbridge.

These measures are in the interest of road safety while contractors undertake resurfacing, structure works, reinstatement of studs and loops and all associated carriageway work.

It is expected that the work will take place for approximately 4 ½ months starting on or after Monday 19 January 2015 between 20:00 and 06:00 (maximum period).

The Order will come into force on 17 January 2015 and have a maximum duration of eighteen months.

During the closures outlined above, traffic affected will be diverted using the A229, M20, A249, A20, A252 and the A251. The diversion route will vary depending on the closure in place. Traffic at Medway Services wanting the Travel Lodge will need to follow the signed diversion route at Medway Services.

The temporary mandatory speed restrictions, slip road closures, hard shoulder running, carriageway closures and diversion routes will be clearly indicated by traffic signs when they are in operation during the works period.

No more money for Darts' Burman

Manager unlikely to get much cash for transfer window buys

Football

By Jamie Weir

Jamie.Weir@archant.co.uk

DARTFORD FC's finance director has said that the club must tighten its belt, despite struggling in the Vanarama Conference.

The Darts, who currently face relegation, sit 22nd in the league after a poor festive period which saw them lose all three matches they played.

And it appears that the team have problems off the pitch too, with the club's finance director, Jason Outram, saying that Dartford 'cannot spend what it does not have' earlier this week.

He wrote in an open letter to supporters that he hopes the club will progress to higher levels, but said that ultimately, Dartford's success was dictated by the amount of money available to the club.

PRINCES PARK: Unlikely to get many new players during the transfer window this month

The club had managed a run of success in the FA Cup, reaching the second round, and banking a cool £43,000 in prize and TV money. It was also expected to have taken significant gate receipts after its cup matches.

This had led Darts fans to hope that its manager Tony Burman would be given a sizable chunk of cash to spend during January's transfer window to help get the club out of the relegation zone.

But despite the FA Cup cash, Outram wrote that it was unlikely there would be much money left in the budget for Burman to make any big buys during the January transfer window.

The finance director said that although he hoped to squeeze a little extra out of the budget for Burman,

'this is not going to mean we can afford significant changes'.

Outram said: "So far we have met our expectations financially, but we have not exceeded them by much.

He said that the club had to be prudent to ensure they were stable, alluding to the period in 1992 when the Darts found themselves struggling to stay afloat.

He said: "My fellow board members are very cognisant of the events of 1992 and we do not want to repeat that time again. This does mean we cannot always do what we or the fans want.

"We do however understand, and share, the fans' concern over the position in the league we currently find ourselves. It would be good to be able to increase the players' budget, but without additional revenue the head has to rule the heart."

Sponsors needed for promising Kent athlete

TUNBRIDGE Wells athlete Scott Richardson has launched a campaign to raise funds to support his bid for a gold medal at the Middle Distance Triathlon European Championships later this year.

The 34-year-old, who is an accomplished marathon runner, finished fourth for Team GB in last year's championships in Majorca. He was unlucky, missing out on a spot on the winners podium by a slim margin - just over a minute.

The race in Majorca was the athlete's first attempt against competitors at that standard, and his brush with success has spurred him on.

He has begun to take coaching to improve his swimming technique, and has also started a fundraising campaign - this will enable him to spend more time training.

ATHLETE: Richardson is trying to raise money to fund his training

He said: "I'm a personal trainer as well as a triathlete and what I really need is time. My girlfriend supports me and my parents do too. My mum even helps with things as simple as washing and cooking up batches of food so I've always got enough.

"My dad has an engineering background and is very tech-oriented, so when I went to Majorca he helped by taking apart my bike to travel and putting it back together before the race.

"It all adds up, but I believe this is the perfect time to ask for support by sponsorship as I am coming off my most successful season ever. As well as funding the race itself, sponsorship would enable me to reduce my working days, giving me more time to focus on my training and bringing home the gold at Rimini."

Two Kent cricketers join the Lions in Africa

TWO of England's Lions from Kent County Cricket Club got their chance to roar this week, joining the squad in their match against South Africa in Soweto.

Sidcup-born spinner, Adam Riley, made a late appearance after both he and Kent batsman Sam Billings were omitted from the initial squad.

But it was a good thing Riley was included in the line up, as he took a wicket with his first ball of a two-over spell in the final session.

The 22-year-old managed to outfox Gauteng big hitter Bradley Dial.

Riley said: "It was a good catch by Alex Lees. He plucked it out of the air one handed at mid wicket after the batsman slogged it pretty firmly.

"It was good to actually get a bowl in the game though, obviously didn't play in the first half of the game so I wasn't sure if there would be the opportunity to bowl in the second innings. Shame the rain came at the time it did as I would have liked a few more overs."

SPITFIRE: More familiar territory for the players

KEEPER: Matt Armstrong-Ford will join the Blues in goal

Blues bolster defence signing new keeper

MARGATE Football Club has signed a new goalkeeper, Matt Armstrong-Ford.

The 25-year-old will be competing with the Blues current keeper, Nikki Bull for the number one jersey and a regular spot in goal.

He has been off the pitch for a season, after suffering an injury while playing for Hastings United.

Before that injury, he had been the club's top keeper, and was slated to be stopping shots for Hastings when they met Middlesbrough in the Third Round of the FA Cup - that was during Hastings' run at cup glory in the 2012/2013 season.

But he picked up an injury to his knee in the second-round replay against Harrogate Town which kept him off the pitch, and he decided to take some time out to recover fully.

The keeper said that he was excited to be joining the club, but that because he'd been out of the game for a while, he thought it may be some time before he was picked regularly for Margate.

He has joined the Blues on a non-contract basis.

Schoolboy still number one

TONBRIDGE schoolboy Helshan Weerasinghe has retained his national junior boy masters table tennis title.

The tournament didn't start well, with the youngster losing his opening match to Cleveland's Billy Forster. He battled back, narrowly avoiding two further losses after he saved match points in both games.

The 17-year-old didn't get the best start to the event held at the BATTS TT Centre in Harlow last weekend.

Weerasinghe only managed one practise session ahead of the tournament having just returned from holiday. The Judd School pupil remains the national junior singles champion and retains his national number one junior ranking.
